Russia as Employer.
Mr. Coolidge Amazed.
England Cuts Wages.
Too Many Killings.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

"CRITICISM IS easy, the art is difficult," as the French say. Russia, working on a five-year plan, begins to realize it.

Bolshevism thought all the evil was with the employers, all high virtue with the workers.

But at present Russia, an employer on a gigantic scale, faces employer's difficulties, and realizes that the genial proletarian is not always 100 per cent perfect or devoted.

RUSSIA HAS been obliged to pay higher wages for better work, giving up the theory that all men are equal, which they are not.

By the end of the five-year program, which may be a success, although Wall street has been "holding its thumbs" hoping it wouldn't, Russia's rulers will know many employers' problems.

If the government succeeds in making an industrial nation of a collection of 200,000 Russian villages, and 100,000,000 Russian farmers, Russia will grow gigantically rich. Then the leaders will change their views, as they do everywhere else, where money flows in and radicalism ebbs.

CALVIN COOLIDGE, sitting with a finger on the pulse of the world, tells readers of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph and other important newspapers that he is amazed at the amount of money actually existing. He notes that tax returns revealed an annual national income "over 140 billions of dollars."

This he finds "beyond human comprehension," and he invites you to realize that 4,000,000 individuals, 500,000 corporations, report incomes, BUT 36,000,000 Americans "gainfully employed" don't pay any income tax.

MR. COOLIDGE says it is fallacy to think that the government "can be supported by taxing the rich."

However, it IS supported by taxing the rich, that is, by those that have the money to pay.

And the 36,000,000 little income earners are quite content to have it that way.

BY AN AGREEMENT with railway workers in England, wages of 100,000 have been reduced 4 1-6 per cent, with the proviso that no adult male will be paid less than 40 shillings ($10) a week.

Conditions may seem to compel such reduction. But it will not help England. The prosperity of a nation, and its rich men, depends on the earning and spending power of the mass of workers.

THERE IS too much crime in this nation. Consider the case of New York City for instance. In 1930 police records show 498 murders, including 37 killed by police discharging their duty.

Sixteen husbands killed their wives, six wives killed their husbands, great self-control comparatively on the part of wives. Of those killed 316 were shot, 76 were stabbed, 58 were blackjacked or otherwise hammered to death, 10 strangled, 2 burned to death, 3 thrown from windows, 13 killed by gas, 2 drowned, 1 killed by acid throwing, 16 cases of infanticide.

EVERYTHING IS easy from the outside looking in. Britain's Labor Party said, with perfect sincerity:

"Give us power and we shall soon settle your unemployment problem."

It got the power, and they still have it, and unemployment is worse than ever.

Now MacDonald may form a coalition cabinet, with Lloyd George in charge of the unemployment riddle. To end unemployment is hard when you have more men than work, more goods than markets, more pessimists than enthusiasts.

But, if anybody could do it, Lloyd George probably is the man.

In the big war he supplied money as chancellor of the exchequer, then he supplied fighting material as minister of munitions, building ammunition factories miles long, not little ones.

And finally, as prime minister, with brains enough to put a Frenchman, Foch, in charge of all Allied armies, he, Lloyd George, won the war more than any other man, with the possible exception of Clemenceau.

"FLAMING YOUTH" flames dangerously.

Rosario Bruno, a Connecticut boy of 18, wanted money to take girls to the theater, and "they were not satisfied with 25-cent movies," he said.

He confesses that he killed Nick Legelis, owner of a lunch wagon, with some others, and got $19. Later, all alone, he killed Harry W. Miller, 74, owner of a gas station, and got $45. He shared in other burglaries and holdups.

The statement that nothing is wrong with our young people may be too broad.

THE WARDEN of Joliet Prison requested the removal of a prison chaplain, because "he fomented discontent among the convicts" and incidentally told them "what this prison needs is a hell of a riot." The prison had the riot yesterday, burning buildings and otherwise taking the alleged advice of the chaplain. It is unwise to be too sympathetic, even with criminals.

AID REACHES SURVIVORS ON ISLAND

Food, Medical Relief Put Ashore for Viking Victims; Injured Taken to Ships

BOSTON, March 19.—(AP.) — A dozen mechanics worked in feverish haste today preparing an amphibian plane to penetrate the frozen wastes of Northern Newfoundland to bring succor to the survivors of the wrecked sealing ship Viking.

Meanwhile, Bernt Balchen, hero of the Byrd trans-Atlantic and Antarctic flights, had retired to a local hotel, after a night at the airport, to rest in preparation for the long flight, which was expected to begin not later than midnight. Balchen was to be at the controls.

Pilot Balchen

The expedition was being prepared by Merion Cooper, motion picture photographer, at the request of Dr. Lewis Frissell, of New York, father of Varick Frissell, one of the Americans who has been missing from the Viking since that vessel was shattered by an explosion off Horse Island in White Bay.

SHIP UNFIT, ALTERED

After viewing the plane Balchen decided she was unfit for the ordeal without considerable alteration, the most vital of which was to increase her cruising radius by adding more gas tanks. The plane would need a gas capacity of 400 gallons, he said, to guarantee a cruising range of at least seven hours.

Balchen said that it would be necessary for him to land at Horse Island if conditions were not favorable. He said food and medical supplies could be dropped by parachute.

AID REACHES SURVIVORS

ST. JOHNS, N. F., March 19.—(AP.)—Food, medical supplies and a doctor reached the survivors of the wrecked sealing ship Viking on Horse Island today.

Dr. Forsey and members of the crew of the sealer Imogene fought their way to the island over close-packed and hummocky ice. They began immediately to take survivors to the Imogene to be fed and sent on to the sealer Sagona nearby. The Sagona was to bring them to St. John's for hospital care.

Consul General Edward A. Dow sent a plea to Washington for an American ice cutter, and was prepared to radio full instructions on how the ice field surrounding the island might be navigated.

Six men already were aboard the Sagona, having been picked up after many hours of exposure on ice and wreckage.

Navigator W. Kennedy, one of the six, has contracted pneumonia; Wireless Operator C. King has frozen feet and has been attacked by gangrene, and Harry Sargent, American explorer, is suffering with an eye affliction.

'SUBSTITUTE' PRISONER ON STAND

Quotes Attorney Rossiter as Saying 'We Put It Over' At Hotel Meeting Here

ERIE, Pa., March 19.—(AP.)—The man who, the government claims, went to jail to serve a 60-day sentence that should have been served by Stanley Wells, of Colburg, Ont., testified today that after he was sentenced, Attorney Samuel Y. Rossiter, of Erie, made a "speech" in a Pittsburgh hotel room and quoted Rossiter as saying:

"We put it over."

The witness pleaded guilty last Saturday to a conspiracy charge under the name of James Patrone, of Buffalo, N. Y. He was called to the witness stand today as Joseph Warner, and was addressed as Warner throughout his examination by the government prosecutor.

CONSPIRACY CHARGE

Rossiter, Joseph Donovan, Erie automobile dealer, and Lester Beals, alies Fred Back, of Buffalo, are on trial charged with conspiracy in the alleged substitution of the man known as Patrone and Warner for Wells. The government claims that Wells was the man arrested as a liquor smuggler on Lake Erie, and that it was he who should have served the 60-day sentence in the Erie County jail.

After sentence was passed upon him by Federal Judge R. M. Gibson in Pittsburgh, Warner testified. Attorneys Rossiter, Max Schoonmaker and Leonard Kreiger, Donovan, Wells, a deputy Unite dStates marshal and his three prisoners, including the witness, and a little boy went to a room in the Fort Pitt hotel in Pittsburgh.

Assistant United States Attorney James I. Marsh asked:

"What did you do when you went into the hotel?"

The witness replied:

"We went up to our room."
"Then what did you do?"
"We all had a drink."
"Then what?"
"We ordered our food."
"What did you do while waiting for the food."
"We all had another drink."

MET IN BUFFALO

Before he told of the alleged meeting in the hotel, the witness testified that he met Wells on December 29, 1929, in Buffalo, and that at that time it was arranged for him to take Wells' place and receive the sentence to be imposed on the liquor smuggling charge.

A short time later, he testified, he went to Pittsburgh with Donovan and they called at the office

DINING ROOM OF STATEVILLE PRISON IN FLAMES AS GUARDS, MILITIA BROUGHT RIOTING CONVICTS UNDER CONTROL

NEW PRISON UPRISING BALKED

400 Soldiers, State Police Guard Two Pens; Rioting Costs $300,000, One Life

JOLIET, Ill., March 19.—(AP.)—Officials ruled Illinois' two state prisons with a hand of iron today to prevent a repetition of yesterday's riot in which five buildings at Stateville penitentiary were burned by some of 1,800 milling prisoners, three of whom were wounded, one fatally, before the insurrection could be put down.

Warden Hill

Warned that the smoldering resentment of the convicts might flare into a new uprising in the older of the two prisons, Warden Henry C. Hill posted extra guards in the dining room, to halt the development of any further plot. They had the support of the state government at Springfield, which indicated the slogan for discipline would be "more guns and less talk."

In addition to 200 national guardsmen, a like number of state highway police, under command of their chief, Walter Moody, were on duty to stop any disturbance like that of yesterday, when property damage estimated at $300,000 was done, and three guards were beaten.

FIRE THREAT DEFIED

Threats on the part of certain convicts in both penitentiaries today to set fire to mattresses were answered by Warden Hill with an order to guards not to let any convict so doing out of his cell. The warden said:

"Let them sleep in the ashes."

Thirty ringleaders of yesterday's revolt were placed in solitary cells today. It is believed those HARRISBURG, March 19.—Following the administration's crack-up in the House yesterday over the Musmanno coal and iron police measure, former Senator Joseph R. Grundy was in the capital today, and Gov. Pinchot's thoughts on changes in the coal and iron police system were unofficially learned for the first time.

Grundy, reticent as ever, was said to be discussing patronage, but it was thought his arrival was prompted by the House action, and to forestall next Monday night any repetition of yesterday's debacle.

So little thought had been given the move of the administration floor leader, D. Glenn Moore,

'TIPS' ON BUYING AID PROBERS

Scores of letters giving supposed "tips" regarding irregular and improper purchase of supplies, have been received by the Citizens' Committee investigating irregularities in the Department of Supplies, it was learned this morning.

Many of the letters are more or less worthless, it was declared, but some contain information meriting consideration.

Assistant District Attorney William H. Colvin, who is in charge of the audit of the records of the controller's office, said today that the audit had barely started. He added that it would continue for some time.

It is merely a "trial separation," however, they said, and a divorce is not contemplated. Both said there had been no marital difficulties, that they see each other every day and are on friendly terms.

Sunday's first wife, Millicent, is dead. He was divorced from the second, Mae, in 1929.

Boats Trail Chaplin As Venetians Cheer

VENICE, Italy, March 19.—(AP.)—Down the Grand Canal of Venice came Charlie Chaplin this afternoon in a triumphal procession reminiscent of the Pied Piper of Hamelin. Big boats, little boats, motor boats, row boats, steam boats, ferry boats and gondolas tagged along behind his motor launch.

Charlie bowed and waved to cheering throngs which filled the windows of famous old palaces along the banks, while police boats churned about trying to keep Charlie's impetuous following from swamping him.

Slide Danger Closes Road to Hill Top

Fearful that the continued wet weather will loosen boulders, shale and earth on the Mt. Washington roadway, Director Edward G. Lang, of the Department of Public Works, today ordered the roadway closed from Liberty Tunnels to Grandview avenue, Mt. Washington traffic was suggested to use the Liberty Tunnels, thence to the hilltop on Boggs avenue.

Show Tidied Up, to Go On; Author, Police Satisfied

"Lysistrata," fairest of Athenian women, will continue to show at the Alvin Theater, slightly veiled, in response to the demand of Public Safety Director James J. Clark, who "hung his head in shame" when he saw her Monday night.

"Lizzie," as she is called by her foster father, Gilbert Seldes, the man who taught her English and sent her to the Alvin to be admired by Pittsburgh theatergoers, is the young lady who also made Detective William O'Bryan, the department's critic, blush.

She was hastily tidied up last night, Seldes, former Pittsburgh newspaperman who hurried here when his adaptation of Aristophanes brought police disapproval, said today that "Lizzie's" form will remain essentially the same as at last night's performance; that the play is now satisfactory to the city.

One mattress, one coverlet and two jars of perfume have come out of the "mattress" scene, he said. The helmet has been withdrawn, temporarily, from the "helmet" scene. He explained:

"I've never been satisfied with the 'mattress scene.' It was too long. That was an expert bit of criticism from Director Clark. We owe him our thanks.

"We hope to be able to keep the helmet in the 'helmet scene.' It only takes two minutes and is exquisitely funny. But, if necessary, we could take all of it out without hurting the show.

"From my point of view, there isn't a bit of dirt in the show. It's just a great big roar of laughter."

Clark was reported confined to his home, today, with a slight cold. O'Bryan was left to care for the department's quarrel with ancient Greek Aristophanes' comic "Lizzie."

Monkeyshines Again in Dear Old Tennessee

Dudley Field was promptly christened Deadly Fumes. The newspaper lads refused to take the trial seriously as Darrow had forgotten to bring his client into court.

Dorothy Suing Caruso's Widow for Moore Gifts

Dorothy Russell Calvit has started a replevin action in New York to recover from Mrs. Enrico Caruso, widow of the tenor, a grand piano and a $12,000 marquise diamond ring which Mrs. Calvit contends once belonged to her mother, the famed Lillian Russell.

Mrs. Calvit's attorney, Ira C. Houck, said today that the piano and ring had been given to Mrs. Caruso by Alexander P. Moore, of Pittsburgh, after the death of his wife, Lillian Russell. Furthermore, no accounting of these articles was made to the Russell estate, according to Houck.

Mrs. Calvit's action is independent of her attempt in the local courts to break the will of Moore. That hearing has been postponed until next month.

'MENTAL ILLNESS' PLEA MADE FOR ATTORNEY CALVERT

DISBARMENT DEFENSE OFFERED

Two Physicians Testify They Doubt Lawyer Accused in Estate Case Will Recover

Attorney George H. Calvert, once one of Pittsburgh's most prominent lawyers, is mentally ill and it is problematical whether he will ever recover, Dr. James P. McKelvy testified today.

Dr. McKelvy's testimony was offered before the Board of Governance of the Pennsylvania Bar Association as the board sat to hear testimony in the disbarment action brought against Calvert for alleged mishandling of the $3,500,000 estate of Mrs. Eleanor Davidson.

ATTORNEYS CONCUR

Dr. George K. Wright, psychiatrist, and two of Calvert's attorneys, W. W. Stoner of Pittsburgh and John G. Conley of Philadelphia, agreed generally with Dr. McKelvy that Calvert, now sick in bed in his home, was not capable of coherent thought.

The board postponed further action until April 1 after Attorney Conley had testified that he and his associates had advised the Calvert family to have a committee appointed to take charge of Calvert and his affairs.

Dr. McKelvy went so far as to testify that he had been trying to have a nurse assigned to Calvert to get him out of bed and keep him active at anything. Dr. McKelvy added:

"In fact, I recommended that he dig postholes."

TELL OF ACTIONS

Calvert's lawyers and physicians painted a vivid picture of his illness. Attorney Conley told of being unable to prepare Calvert's case because of 100 pages of "vague, vituperative, vindictive" answers to the charges which Calvert had sent him.

Dr. McKelvy told of Calvert's actions being indiscreet, that he bought horses and cattle and autos. Here Attorney Stoner interjected:

"Tell them how many horses he bought, doctor."

Dr. McKelvy answered:

"I don't know exactly, but I think it was 21. I know he bought two new automobiles, some prize cattle and improved his property, notwithstanding that he was in debt. He has grandiose ideas and delusions of persecution.

"I saw Calvert again in January. He was arrogant, oppressive and extravagant. Again I visited him on March 1. He was quite unable to think to any conclusion. I saw him on March 15 (last Sunday) and he was in the same state. He does not require a nurse, for his condition is a mental one."

DEPRESSED

Dr. Wright told of Calvert's passing from one phase of mental depression to another since last November, when the hearing was postponed.

Attorney Harbaugh Miller, associate of Calvert in law, denied to the board a report that Calvert had practiced law since last November.

Attorney William McFall, a member of the board, called upon Attorney Stoner to make a statement as to Calvert's condition. Stoner did not take issue with the previous witnesses.

A LESSON ON STRIKING :-: By Quin Hall

MOTHER PRAYS FOR FUGITIVE

A mother's prayer followed the manhunt in New York today for two Broughton youths sought in the killing of State Police Sergeant John Frye near Albany yesterday.

The mother is Mrs. Rosie Schemnitzer. Her son, William, 19, is one of the fugitives who, police say, fled south in a stolen automobile yesterday afternoon, leaving the body of Sergt. Frye behind and disarming his companion, Patrolman Edward C. Updyke. His companion, police say, is Stanley Chero, 20.

As she exhibited three postcards, bearing messages of love, today, the kindly old German mother broke down. She sobbed:

"My son was a good boy, but he couldn't get work here, so he went away with Stanley. They went to Cleveland to get jobs on a lake boat. I didn't want him to go, and neither did his father. I pray to God, he didn't do it."

Schemnitzer and young Chero left Broughton March 8, jobless by the last pay cut at the Pittsburgh Coal Company mines at Library.

Chero, motherless, left behind two sisters and a hard-working father.

Harry Gerhold, of Venetia, to whom were issued license plates attached to the car used by the killers said his machine had been stolen in Pittsburgh on March 7.

BEAUTY TO FACE TRIAL IN MAY

By BARON GEORGE WRANGEL
Universal Service Special Cable.

NICE, France, March 19.—Mrs. Fred G. Nixon-Nirdlinger must stand trial for the death of her husband a week ago, it was indicated by Magistrate Louis Vachier after he had heard her description of the tragedy. The trial will probably take place in May.

For two and a half hours yesterday, the former St. Louis beauty queen told the magistrate, in a voice broken by recurring sobs, how she shot and killed her husband in their villa. It was learned proceedings had to be halted several times when she became hysterical, crying out:

"I was panic-stricken and fired the revolver without a thought of killing. But how I regret my act now!"

NEW FARM AID PLAN LIKELY

WASHINGTON, March 19.—(INS.)—The possibility that a new administration farm relief program may grow out of the reconciliation between President Hoover and Senator W. E. Borah, of Idaho, was envisioned here today in the wake of Borah's visit to the White House yesterday.

Borah spent nearly two hours with Mr. Hoover, discussing party affairs and policies. It marked his first appearance at the White House since he became one of Mr. Hoover's severest critics.

Cynical politicians called attention to the fact that after more than a year of coolness and strained relationship, the President's invitation to Senator Borah was extended within a week after the Idahoan was named chairman of the agricultural section of the bi-partisan Progressives here last week.

FIRM TO BUILD FLIVVER TYPE PLANES HERE

Main Aeronautics Leases County Airport Site; Ship To Sell Under $1,000

Plans for the manufacture of a new type flivver airplane, priced to sell for less than $1,000, were revealed here today. The ship will be put into production at the new County Airport, according to present plans. It will be built by Main Aeronautics Company which yesterday was leased a temporary manufacturing site at the airport by the County Commissioners.

For the present Pittsburgh School of Aviation, a subsidiary of Main Aeronautics, will use the manufacturing plant which will be set up in a frame and stucco dwelling leased to Main yesterday at a cost of $600 a year.

TO EXTEND ACTIVITIES

The school during the past years, according to Maurice R. Scharff, president of Main Aeronautics, has been manufacturing repair parts and standard sections of airplanes and gliders for which Main has sales agencies. The work has been done by students and instructors in the school, and a number of different types of ribs for Waco planes and Waco and Detroit Gull gliders, several complete wings and one complete fuselage have been turned out in this manner.

According to an announcement by Scharff, the company is planning to extend these activities and to go into production on a larger scale. In his announcement he said:

"In addition, consideration is being given to the manufacture of a light airplane, priced to sell for $1,000 or less, and considerable progress has been made upon its design."

LOCATION DESIRABLE

The announcement further states that Main Aeronautics believes that the new county airport provides a desirable location for such activities. Scharff declared:

"It is felt that a desirable location for these operations will be at the new municipal airport, which will be convenient for the students in the company's downtown mechanics courses and where supplemental personnel with experience in airplane construction and repair can readily be obtained."

The school will begin its activities at the county airport, Scharff declared, as soon as the building can be made ready for occupancy.

WOMAN'S DEATH PUZZLES ERIE

ERIE, March 19.—(AP.)—A blonde woman, about 35, who, police said, had been beaten to death with a piece of iron and dropped into Lake Erie, furnished a baffling case for investigators today.

Inquiries for reports of missing persons in an effort to identify the victim brought only one from Edinboro concerning a woman whose description did not completely tally.

Children playing about the docks sighted the floating body yesterday. The coroner's office reported the body may have been in the lake several months.

Chains had been wrapped carefully about the victim. A rope attached to a 20-pound iron weight was drawn tightly about the woman's throat. The body was cheaply but neatly dressed.

Dance to Pay For Wounded Boy's Care

WASHINGTON, March 19.—(AP.)—D. A. Stansbury moved today to help a widowed mother pay the hospital bill of her son, who was wounded while at play. Stansbury's son, Harold, 8, shot Jackie Bennett, 8, while playing "Indian."

Harold said the safety catch on the .22 caliber rifle moved and the gun fired accidentally.

His father announced yesterday he would give a dance Monday to obtain funds to help pay the hospital bills of the wounded youngster.

SAYS SKIDMORE SHOT CRIPPLE

Eugene Batdorf, 20-year-old McKees Rocks youth, resumed the witness stand in his own defense in Criminal Court today in his effort to clear himself of a charge of murder.

He is on trial before Visiting Judge Norman T. Boose of Somerset County, for the slaying of Charles Hamon, crippled attendant at the Liberty Bell gasoline station, Warrington avenue, during a robbery last September 20.

Batdorf based his plea of innocence on the assertion that he did not fire the shot that killed Hamon, and his statement that he did not actually participate in the robbery.

Batdorf, under cross-examination by District Attorney Roy T. Clunk, said Skidmore had used "psychology on me." He added:

"He told me what a fine fellow I was and how everything would come out all right as he tried to convince me to go into this thing with him. I had never done anything wrong before."

He said fugitive George C. Skidmore, who shot his way through a cordon of state police when they discovered him hiding in a cabin on Rattlesnake Mountain, near Bellefonte, had shot Hamon and carried off the cash register from the gas station.

U. S. Lets Down Bars To Irish Poetess

VICTORIA, B. C., March 19.—(AP.)—G. E. Bucklin, American consul, announced today Ella Young, Irish poetess and authority on Celtic mythology, would be admitted to the United States upon receipt of assurance that she would not become a public charge.

New Cave-In Halts Rescue in Tunnel

DEATH CAR CLUE IN MANHUNT

CHICAGO, March 19.—(INS.)—Search for the two killers of Miss Norma Newby, 36, whose body was found in the Elk Grove forest preserve, centered today in the South Atlantic seaboard states where the automobile in which she was kidnaped was found abandoned.

Frank J. Murray, 47-year-old businessman who admitted a long friendship with the woman, was expected to win his release from police custody today when hearing on a writ of habeas corpus is to be heard.

Murray, who was the last person seen in the company of the dead woman, was held for further interrogation by authorities although discovery of his automobile in Jonesville, Va., appeared to corroborate his story that he and Miss Newby had been kidnaped by two gunmen. The gunmen, he said, beat him into unconsciousness and then disappeared with Miss Newby in his automobile.

The woman's body was found half buried in snow in a remote section of the forest preserve. She had been beaten on the head with an automobile tire wrench and a post mortem examination disclosed a bullet wound in the arm.

Gunwoman Holds Up Store, Taking $100

NEW YORK, March 19.—(AP.)—A gunwoman held up a Brooklyn merchant and his wife and escaped with $100. The woman, described as smartly dressed, blonde and pretty, entered the store of Mr. and Mrs. Max Rosveld, near the Kings County Hospital, and asked for a nurses' outfit.

As Mrs. Rosveld prepared to serve her, she drew a gun and ordered the couple to hold up their hands. Getting the cash, she backed to the door and fled.

WILKINS' SUB AT SEA IN TEST

Nautilus Off for New York On First Leg of Journey To Explore in Arctic

By HERMAN GIESKE

PHILADELPHIA, March 19.—Sir Hubert Wilkins' sturdy little steel whale Nautilus, on which he and a company of 19 scientists and adventurers hope to voyage under the Arctic ice to the North Pole, put out to sea today. It was bound for New York harbor on the first stage of a 20,000-mile journey.

The Nautilus skipper, Capt. Sloan Danenhower, veteran former submarine officer of the United States Navy, was in command. He stated if all went well he would bring the ship into port today.

VIEWED BY NAVY MEN

Yesterday was spent by the Nautilus' picked crew putting the sub-sea boat in shape for the run along the Jersey coast. Unlike Monday, when the Nautilus was operating in a blinding snowstorm, using only her electric motors, it was believed the boat could now use her powerful twin Diesel engines continuously for the remainder of the trial voyage.

The curious superstructure of the Nautilus, moored in the Philadelphia Navy Yard, where she sought shelter from the raging elements, attracted a throng of high Navy officers. They commented highly on the Nautilus' many fantastic features, such as her three ice-boring machines, her under-the-ice "trolley pole" and her electric heating, cooking and refrigerating equipment.

DIVING TESTS NEXT

While the Nautilus will be able to remain five days under the ice without her officers and crew suffering for air, it will be necessary for the boat to come to the surface every 40 hours to recharge her batteries.

From New York harbor the Nautilus will move to New London, Conn., for deep-sea diving tests. Thence she will move to Halifax, Nova Scotia, for submergence under the ice amid conditions similar to those expected at the North Pole.

VERNE ARRIVES

NEW YORK, March 19.—(AP.)—Jean Jules Verne docked in New York today to play a ceremonial part in as outlandish an adventure as his grandfather, Jules Verne, ever imagined.

On Tuesday he will break a bottle over the prow of a submarine in Brooklyn Navy Yard and call the craft "Nautilus," the name of the diving vessel in his grandfather's "Twenty Thousand Leagues Under the Sea." The submarine will be used by Sir Hubert Wilkins in his projected under-ice journey across the top of the world.

Pittsburgher Named Captain of Reserves

WASHINGTON, March 19.—(AP.)—David R. Douglass, of 3344 Portola street, Pittsburgh, was appointed by the War Department as a captain of coast artillery in the Officers' Reserve Corps.

Other appointments were: Joseph B. Claffey, of Philadelphia, second lieutenant of chemical warfare, and William R. Finney, Elizabeth, second lieutenant of infantry.

75,000 Assessments Reduced in Detroit

DETROIT, March 19.—(AP.)—Between 75,000 and 80,000 property owners in Detroit will benefit by a reduction in assessments, Kenneth I. McCarren, member of the board of assessors, predicted today.

The number represents approximately one-sixth of the tax roll of the city.

Coolidge Hails Spring And Maple Sugar Time

NORTHAMPTON, Mass., March 19.

To the Editor of the Sun-Telegraph:

Springtime is advancing up the valleys and slopes of the northern hills, where old-time country life still lingers. The end of the work of the winter is revealed in the accumulated wood pile in the yard. The mounting sun has started a new earth movement in preparation for another seed-time. Hope is returning.

Mr. Coolidge

The sugar season is opening. It is time to bring out the sap buckets and the great pans. In the early morning the long sled drawn by the strong, steady oxen will break out the road into the sugar lot. Then the maple trees will be tapped, the spouts set and the buckets hung. The dropping sap will make pleasant music, mingling with the cry of the blue jays and the complaining of the squirrels.

After noon the gathering of the sap begins. The great fire roars in the arch. The sap dancing in the pan sends clouds of steam to the tree tops. The air will be filled with incomparable flavor of new maple syrup in assurance that the earth is again pouring forth her first seasonal bounty. Those who once lived among these scenes of the awakening of nature cannot but find themselves awakened and transformed.

Modern Children Approve Bootlegger, Teachers Told

PHILADELPHIA, March 19.—(AP.)—Researches show the modern child knows more about bootleggers than he does about any other item of the country's economic and social life, William John Cooper, United States commissioner of education, told a meeting of the Annual Schoolmen's Week at the University of Pennsylvania. This, he asserted, is because the influence of home and church was waning. He declared:

"Many children regard the bootlegger simply as a well-dressed and wealthy man. An appreciable percentage of the boys could see nothing wrong about being a bootlegger except the interference of the police."

Mr. Cooper said that after the bootlegger, the items best known to children, in order, were, divorce, sheriff, Juvenille Court, ball, jury, mayor, election, polling place, ballot, taxes, insurance, bank, tent and bank deposit. He continued:

"Under modern conditions, some of the factors which have influenced the characters of children are breaking down. To a question asked of a school child in a survey—'What is done at an election?'—the answer was: 'You write who is to be mayor, and then collect your money.' Investigation showed the children know all about vote-buying."

As a part of the work the home should do, Mr. Cooper urged the discarding of the doctrine that "children should be seen, and not heard," and criticized "white lies" and "social fibs" as harmful influences.

Buddy Rogers Prefers U. S. Girls to Foreign Beauties

LOS ANGELES, March 19.—Louella O. Parsons, quizzing Charles (Buddy) Rogers in their radio interview last night, asked:

"What was the most interesting thing you saw in Europe?"

"The eight Buddy Rogers and eight Ruth Chattertons making eight foreign versions in a Paris motion picture studio was the most interesting, and meeting Prince George, son of the English king, was the most thrilling."

"What about the girls? Didn't you fall in love with any of the far-famed Parisian beauties?"

"I didn't see one woman in Europe who compared with our American girls."

Miss Parsons, motion picture editor of Universal Service and the Hearst newspapers, asked Buddy why he didn't get married if he liked our American girls so much, saying:

"I'm always seeing you dancing with Anita Page, Mary Brian, June Collyer or Frances Dee. Which one is it?"

"I like them all, to be frank. They're all beautiful and all great girls, but I've never been able to persuade any one of them to have me."

This interview was the sixth of a series of radio broadcasts conducted with world-famous stars on the Musical Cocktail Hour over the Columbia Broadcasting System in a tie-up that reaches all over the United States.

Next week Miss Parsons will interview lovely Norma Shearer, the popular Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer star.

STUDENT STRIKERS AT W. & J. VOTE TO STAY OUT

BAKER FIRM, WON'T QUIT POST

350 at Meeting Vote to Continue Walkout Until Monday; Await Trustees

By J. C. NEILSON
Staff Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, Pa., March 19. — Corridors and classrooms of Washington and Jefferson College were still silent and deserted today, as the student strike against what they termed the high handed administration of President Simon S. Baker went into its second day. While students showed some signs of giving ground, Dr. Baker stood firm against the flood of criticism directed at him because of his alleged autocratic rule. He declared he had no intention of quitting under fire.

At a closed meeting of about 350 of the 412 enrolled at the institution last night, it was voted to continue absence from classes until next Monday. The meeting was presided over by Frederick S. Niccol, president of the Student Assembly, and the situation was discussed by other leaders. It is proposed to present the signed petition demanding Dr. Baker's removal to a member of the Board of Trustees, probably the secretary, today, and then to await the action of the board at its regular session next Wednesday.

CHARGES REVEALED

The 11 charges contained in the student petition demanding Dr. Baker's ouster were made public today by representatives of the student council. In them Dr. Baker is charged with lacking administrative ability, reversal of policy and possessing the attitude of an autocrat and a czar. They say he discharged scholarly and competent professors and retains inferior ones, and that the college has deteriorated under his administration.

The students claim Dr. Baker had failed as a college president and that he has proven himself inefficient in support of the alumni and student body. His antagonistic attitude has aroused faculty members, the students aver.

Dr. Baker said today that the students had dropped all the charges against him with the exception of the claim that he was an autocrat and a czar. On the other hand, students say Dr. Baker has not been informed as to the charges, and will not be officially informed until Monday, when they plan to confer with the college president.

TRADITION UPSET

One grievance against the methods of Dr. Baker was that of a violation of tradition, voiced yesterday by Harper Allen, prominent citizen of the town, and a great-great-grandson of the college's founder, Dr. John McMillan. Allen states that during President Baker's reign, the student body has gradually been divorced from the right belief in the school's origin, and has been brought to recognize, in its campus publications, Dr. Thaddeus Dodd, said to be a great-great-grandfather of Dr. Baker, as founder of the institution.

GUNS BOOM AS CRUISE STARTS

President and Party Board Battleship Arizona for Voyage of 3,000 Miles

OLD POINT COMFORT, Va., March 19.—(AP.)—As batteries boomed from ship and shore, the battleship Arizona steamed out toward the Virginia Capes and the sea this morning carrying President Hoover to America's island possessions in the Caribbean.

The recently remodeled dreadnaught, the Navy's most modern fighting craft, will carry the President and his party through 3,000 miles of the Caribbean to Porto Rico and the Virgin Islands.

Arriving by train this morning from Washington, members of the presidential party breakfasted aboard their cars and then motored to the dock in army automobiles.

MORNING MISTS

As they reached the embarking point, the warship was but dimly visible through the early morning mists, although less than a mile off shore. The President boarded an admiral's barge and as the craft shoved off, the President's flag was run up the main truck of the Arizona.

High overhead, an Army blimp and two fast pursuit planes circled the boarding party and, as the President strode up the gangway, 21 huge bombers from Langley Field droned out of the distant sky to join in the Navy's welcome to the Chief Executive.

The planes continued flying in formation until 4 bells—8 o'clock—when the signal for the departure was given.

SALUTE FIRED

The Presidential salute, 21 guns, boomed forth and was answered by the belching batteries of Fortress Monroe.

With the President were Secretaries Hurley and Wilbur, whose departments have supervision of the islands to be visited; Lawrence Richey, one of his secretaries; Capt. Joel Boone, White House physician; Capt. Russell Train, naval aide; Col. Campbell Hodge, military aide, and Mark Sullivan, political writer. There were also 18 newspaper writers and six photographers.

The special train bearing President Hoover on the first leg of his journey arrived here at 5:55 o'clock this morning.

Fifteen miles north of Richmond, a coupling between the baggage car and the first coach tore loose, causing the brakes to be applied automatically on the free cars.

The flagman planted flares a half mile in rear of the train to prevent a rear-end collision and in a few minutes the engine steamed off with its full train in tow.

The President apparently was unaware of the incident.

GOV. ROOSEVELT SIFTS CHARGES

ALBANY, N. Y., March 19.—(INS.)—Having issued a solemn warning against any speculation on what action he may take, Gov. Roosevelt today was making an exhaustive study of the charges filed with him by the city affairs committee of New York demanding removal from office of Mayor Walker, New York executive.

There was no indication as to when the Governor might reach a "judicial determination," as he expressed it, in regard to the charges. He is going over the bill of complaint prepared by the Rev. John Haynes Holmes and Rabbi Stephen S. Wise, chairman and vice chairman of the city affairs committee, with his legal adviser, Samuel I. Rosenman.

Soldiers Rule at Joliet; Guard Against Latest Threat of Mutiny

who fomented the trouble were a group of young convicts transferred from the chair factory of the Joliet prison to the chair factory at Stateville for being disturbers at Joliet.

The spirit of unrest spread today to the women's division. Warden Hill today rushed a quantity of tear gas bombs to the women's penitentiary.

Overcrowding of men in both prisons, which are separated by five miles, and resentment against parole board procedure, were blamed by Warden Hill for yesterday's outbreak in Stateville. Other sparks which helped to touch off the revolt were the killing February 22 of three prisoners as they tried to escape from the old building and the rioting there last Saturday in which two prisoners were killed and two wounded. Another was the death of a prisoner in solitary confinement.

CHAIRMAKERS RIOT

The rioting of the 1,800 convicts began in the Stateville chair factory, by a pre-arranged signal. Stateville is the newer of the two prisons. All morning long the prisoners were holding up two fingers of their hands, which prison authorities learned afterward was their method of telling each other that the uprising was to start at 2 p. m. At that hour 180 convicts in the chair factory attacked three guards, lit torches of inflammable material and ran into the prison yard.

Almost simultaneously there was an outpouring of convicts from adjourning buildings. Seizing torches they applied them to the laundry, the shoe and carpenter shop, the garage and the dining rooms, and then, under cover of the smoke assembled in the open yard. Efforts of the Rev. Eligius Weir, the Catholic chaplain, to stop the men resulted in nothing but hoots and cries against the Illinois Parole Board.

Another chorus of jeers greeted Warden Hill when he walked, unarmed, into the yard and ordered the convicts back to their cells. As he spoke armed guards from the prison walls were gathering, but the prisoners stood their ground. At the warden's direction two shots were fired by them over the tops of their heads, but still they refused to move. There was another order for the men to disperse. This likewise was refused, and the guards fired. Three fell wounded.

FLEE TEAR BOMBS

The shooting put an end to the affair, and the prisoners hastened to their cells to escape the fumes of tear bombs, hurled by the guards. The prison gates then were opened to admit members of the Joliet Fire Department, who put down the flames. They had help from John L. Esser, former Aurora (Ill.), banker, sentenced for embezzlement, who handled a line of hose until the flames were extinguished.

Richard Loeb, one of the young Chicago "thrill killers" of Bobby Franks, was in the new prison at Statesville, but is not blamed for participation in the rebellion.

His confederate in the Franks murder, Nathan Leopold, was on his way to Stateville from the old penitentiary when the general alarm was sounded. The bus in which he was riding with other prisoners was turned back.

Representative Michael Igoe, member of the investigating committee which began its probe of prison conditions today, hurried here when word of the rebellion was flashed. The legislators will probe charges of cruelty and the assertion of a resigned prison chaplain that conditions are deplorable and that liquor and narcotics are peddled within the walls.

HYMIE'S FRIEND OFFERS ALIBI

CLEVELAND, March 19.—(AP.)—"Akron Mary" Woodfield not only has an alibi for herself and "Pittsburgh Hymie" Martin, but expects to be able to substantiate it.

Police investigating the murder of former Councilman William E. Potter, which is charged against Martin, said the alibi is that she and Martin were at the home of his brother in Dormont, Pa., the night of February 3, when Potter was killed in Cleveland. Mary said she called Dormont police from the residence of Martin's brother when a flaming water heater threatened to explode. She said Chief of Police R. B. Miller turned off the heater that day.

Chief Miller today said he remembers the incident, but was unable to say if it was Mrs. Mary Outland Woodfield he had seen in the house. He could not remember the date.

Richard Connolly, 24, of 7 Jacksonia street, North Side, in whose home detectives reported capturing Mrs. Woodfield, was at liberty on a $1,000 bail bond today while local and Cleveland detectives endeavored to learn how the woman got to the house.

DOG LOCKED UP WITH MASTER

A police dog and his master occupied adjoining cells in the Center Avenue Police Station throughout the night all because, police said, the master imbibed too freely of moonshine.

Helpless, the man lay in Center avenue, near Roberts street, for almost an hour with the faithful dog at his side. The dog stuck by its master and barked at a crowd that gathered. It made no less than a dozen attempts to pull the man into the lobby of an abandoned theater by seizing him by his coat collar.

The dog snapped at Wagonmen Paul Jovanovic and Howard Caldwell when they arrived with the patrol wagon. The wagonmen hurried back to the police station and a few minutes later returned with a rope. The animal was lassoed. The man was placed in one cell and his pet in another.

STORY IS TOLD BY 'SUBSTITUTE'

of Attorney Schoonmaker, son of Federal Judge F. P. Schoonmaker. Attorney Schoonmaker was not there, and Donovan went to Attorney Kreiger's office and talked with Kreiger, the witness said.

Later, he said, he went to the William Penn Hotel for lunch. Present, he testified, were Wells, Schoonmaker, Donovan and himself. He said that Donovan and Schoonmaker talked in whispers and he could not hear what they were saying.

SCHOONMAKER PARLEY

He testified that when they left, Schoonmaker said he would see them the next day. Wells, he said, had not talked much, and when he did, in undertones.

Warner testified that on the next day, he, Wells and Donovan went back to Schoonmaker's office, that they saw Kreiger there, and that Kreiger and Donovan went into a private office. Later, he said, Kreiger told him that when he pleaded, he was to say he was married and had two children.

The witness said that he went to the Federal Building to plead before Judge Gibson.

After sentence was passed, the witness said, he went to the Fort Pitt with Schoonmaker, Kreiger, Donovan, Wells, Rossiter, a deputy United States marshal and two other prisoners, and a little boy.

ROSSITER AT JAIL

The witness said that on the day after he was jailed, Rossiter and Donovan appeared at the jail and told him that what ever anyone asked him, he was to tell them Rossiter was his attorney.

Warner was turned over to Francis Quinn of defense counsel for cross-examination. Asked where he lived, he said the address was 416 Franklin street, Buffalo. He said he was introduced to Wells by a man named Simon, a bookmaker, of Buffalo.

The witness testified he went to Fort Erie later and saw Wells, and Wells showed him a letter from Pittsburgh, which discussed the case against him. The letter, he said, mentioned a fee would be $1,250 and that the sentence probably would be 60 days.

Warner said Wells asked him about going to Pittsburgh to see "the fixer."

Attorney Quinn asked the witness if they had agreed on any compensation. The witness replied that it was not even mentioned, but Simon had told him the day before that Wells would pay $1,000 to him if Warner got 60 days in jail and $500 if he drew a suspended sentence.

Servants Rule Mayfair In Hot Election Fight

LONDON, March 19.—(AP.)—The butler and scullery maid today were the most important persons in Mayfair, where a bitterly contested by-election campaign reached its climax at the ballot box.

Because of the English system the "living in" servant population in Mayfair is larger than the population of masters and mistresses, and it is the backstairs vote which undoubtedly today will decide the polling.

The campaign has been strictly a Conservative party dog-fight, with A. Duff Cooper, husband of Lady Diana Manners, as the regular Conservative candidate, and Sir Ernest Petter the candidate of the anti-Baldwin Conservative faction backed by the Beaverbrook and Rothermere Press.

As an indication of the temper of the campaign, Sir Ernest has referred to Cooper as the "softy candidate," while Cooper has declared his opposition "hasn't the guts of a louse."

It has been quite proper for drawing rooms to be turned into political halls and the neighbor's cook invited in to shake hands with the M. P. aspirant. It is a matter of great delicacy for the mistress of a household to approach her own servants and usually it "just isn't done."

One butler is said to have reminded his mistress in this fashion:

"May I have the liberty to point out that the ballot, madam, is secret."

Radio Singer to Adopt Wife's 'Want-Ad' Baby

KANSAS CITY, March 19.—(AP.)—Harmony was the keynote today in the home of a radio musician shaken with the revelation a baby girl, Louise, his wife presented him New Year's Eve was not her own.

F. A. Bartlett, 33, who dedicated a radio song to the child, said he would adopt her and was content in the tearful assurance of his wife that a 5-year-old son, Junior, was of their blood. Mrs. Bartlett said another child, a daughter, 7, was born to her in a former marriage. Bartlett said:

"We're going to keep the baby and be happy. Everything's all right."

Mrs. Bartlett said she had fabricated the other story two months ago to convince police she could maintain the deception in her home. She yielded to their pursuasion in telling her husband yesterday she sought his happiness when she feigned illness and obtained the dimpled Louise through a newspaper "want-ad."

COUNTY CHANGE ON 'TRICKY' BIDS ASKED

Specifications Assailed Following Postponement Of Awards on Contracts

New specifications should be submitted for furniture for the new county office building in place of the tricky descriptions which caused the County Commissioners to hold up the contracts for two weeks in the opinion of bidders today.

The contracts were ordered held up after Commissioner C. C. McGovern asked that the motion awarding contracts for the furniture to the Pittsburgh Office Equipment Company and the General Fireproofing Company be nullified because of a mistake in presenting the bids to the commissioners.

BENZ QUESTIONED

Before asking that the contracts be withdrawn, McGovern questioned C. C. Benz, of the county purchasing agent's office, about reports that specifications of articles needed were tricky in so far as they made competive bidding impossible.

Benz replied that he had drawn up the specifications after conferring with various departmental heads, and that in his opinion they set forth clearly the kind of furniture needed.

He said that by designating furniture by the name of the manufacturing company and by its catalogue number and description he gave all the bidders an opportunity of determining the kind of furniture needed to furnish the various offices uniformly by referring to the specified company's catalogue.

SPECIFIED COMPANIES

Bidders said that the specifications set forth that desks, tables and chairs made by specified companies were wanted. They are anxious to learn whether bids offered were all according to specifications.

The bidders also questioned the county's right to buy the equipment from pictures rather than from samples which could be examined to determine the quality of the article.

One bidder called attention to an item which set forth:

"Three drawer counter height steel letter filed with automatic locks, progressive roller dispensions, positive locking follower blocks, grained walnut finish. The key specifications also covers a continuous linoleum top with bronze binding strips for seven files as made by Art Metal Construction Company."

ALUMINUM CHAIRS

The bidder then called attention to the last sentence in the specifications, which sets forth:

"Bids on aluminum chairs, where they conform to the specifications will be considered, but no bids on metal furniture of any other kind will be considered."

He then said that his understanding of just what was wanted in the way of metal furniture is cloudy, unless the specifications mean that the products of the Art Metal Construction Company are the only ones that will be considered.

DUESSELDORF, Germany, March 19.—(AP.)—One person was killed and two policemen and five civilians were injured in street fighting as authorities dispersed a Communist demonstration here. The demonstrators hurled rocks and fired shots at the police who replied with their revolvers.

W. Va. Bank Closes, Drought Is Blamed

FAIRMONT, W. Va., March 19.—(AP.)—The Worthington National Bank of Worthington, Marion County, near here, was closed today because of what its directors described as a virtual collapse of business because of economic depression and drought.

Second Coming of Messiah Seen by Miss Pankhurst

NEW YORK, March 19.—(AP.)—Miss Chistabel Pankhurst, daughter of Emmeline Pankhurst, noted British militant suffragist of the last generation, believes that the second coming of Christ is at hand.

She is confident it will occur in her lifetime—that she will actually see Him.

Her faith, she said today, is based on the fulfillment of prophecies first uttered by Moses and reiterated through the Bible to the end of Revelations.

Miss Pankhurst does not hold with those who believe the reappearance will mean the end of the world, but she expects it to be dramatic enough so that there can be no doubt of His identity. She said:

"Two thousand years ago He came in poverty and weakness and humility. But this time He will descend to the earth in all His majesty with demonstrations of divine power more miraculous than any of the miracles of modern science."

Rather than violence and destruction, Miss Pankhurst believes, the return of Christ will mark the beginning of a millenium of perhaps a thousand years in which He will rule the world—an age of such peace and progress and splendor as the earth has never seen.

But His coming may occur she thinks, during another world war in which, because of the advance of modern warfare, the destruction of the human race will appear to be imminent. This, she said today, is foretold repeatedly in the Bible.

Chiefly in the unrest which she sees in the present age—crime, wars, rumors of wars, economic depressions, political upheavals, rebellion against authority, fear in the hearts of men—does Miss Pankhurst recognize fulfillment of prophecies uttered many centuries ago.

COUNTY WIDENS BIDDING FIELD

Steps have been taken by the County Commissioners to insure a maximum of competition through broad specifications for material required for public work.

At a commissioners' meeting yesterday, Chairman Joseph G. Armstrong said to representatives of the Department of Public Works:

"We may have standards for material, but the specifications must be drawn so broad that every dealer may have a chance to bid if he so cares. We have a bureau of tests which must see that all material bought meets the specifications."

County Bridge Engineer V. R. Covell said:

"We will see that all specifications are broad enough."

Armstrong's warning was issued during consideration of a request from the Works department for permission to advertise for the purchase of 90,000 feet, b. m., of white oak lumber at an estimated cost of $9,200; 4,500 steel plates at an estimated cost of $2,000, and 6,000 gallons of paint at an estimated cost of $7,900.

'TIPS' ON BUYING AID CITY PROBERS

Lang Prepares Defense to Charges Filed by Evans; Will Uphold Contracts

longed for weeks or months. He said:

"I do not know how long the audit will continue, but it is not going to be conducted for weeks and months. If the auditors are too long I will stop it. We are not going to permit it to be carried on at a heavy cost without some reason for it."

Kerr said that he was expecting a report upon one year, 1930, but had not yet received it from the auditors.

LANG SCANS CHARGES

Preparing to defend his department's action on 78 sewer and paving contracts in which irregularities are charged by Henry Oliver Evans, former city controller, Public Works Director Edward G. Lang today was collecting data to refute the accusations at a public hearing next Wednesday.

The date of the hearing was set late yesterday by President John S. Herron, of City Council, after Lang and Evans agreed to the time. The investigation is scheduled to get under way at 10 a. m.

AIDES TO TESTIFY

Lang said today he would have Charles Reppert, his chief engineer, and other attaches of the department present to testify. Tom Reed, another engineer, whose actions have brought charges by Evans, will testify, Lang said, if he has recovered from his illness by that time. Reed has been confined to his home for several days.

Lang and Evans asked an open investigation. Council's action in acceding to the demands was in direct contrast to the procedure when a probe into activities of the Department of Supplies was asked by the League of Women Voters and other organizations several weeks ago.

Commenting on the hearing, Lang said:

"The date is agreeable to me. I'm sure that we have nothing to worry about. All my records will be available and will be brought by me at that time to the Council chamber for inspection. I have nothing to hide. I welcome this probe."

78 CONTRACTS CITED

In a letter to Council yesterday, which was received by President Herron, 78 contracts were cited by Evans as irregular. Evans told Herron that he would proceed "on the assumption that Council is on the square."

Evans assured the executive he had no assurance fraud had been committed, but added "I am convinced that it has been."

Explaining that he was a business lawyer and not a prosecuting attorney, Evans said that he wasn't trying to put anyone in jail.

All members of Council will be permitted to ask any questions they might desire regarding Lang's activities, W. Y. English, chairman of Council's Finance Committee, asserted when the charges of Evans were turned over to the committee on hearings for action.

AUDIT CONTINUES

This was asserted in answer to the objection of Councilman Charles Anderson, who thought specific reference to certain contracts might have a tendency to "whitewash" the department.

While both Evans and Lang prepared to go to Council, the double audit into records and contracts of the Department of Supplies continued at the City-County Building. Representatives of the district attorney's office are looking on.

The audits are being conducted by the Citizens' Committee, the League of Women Voters and Controller James P. Kerr.

So far neither Dr. Kerr nor representatives of the Citizens' Committee have divulged any information concerning findings in former Director Bertram L. Succop's method of conducting the department.

For the third day Controller Kerr was absent, due to a severe cold. Auditors today asked for all the case files for 1930. While one set of auditors work on the 1930 file, the other is working on the 1929 file.

Pola Negri Divorce Decision Reserved

PARIS, March 19.—(INS.)—Decision was reserved today in the suit for divorce brought by Pola Negri, film star, against Prince Serge Mdivani.

Neither Miss Negri nor the prince were present when the case was called for trial. The film actress' lawyer pleaded "indifference" on the part of the prince as basis for the action, citing Pola's willingness to abandon the divorce action, but charging Mdivani had refused to do so.

KINGWOOD, W. Va., March 19.—(AP.)—William Henlein, 40, "wild man" of the Reno district, faced a two to ten-year term in the state penitentiary today as a result of his conviction on a charge of breaking and entering.

No More Special Blend Coffee

Because of the low prices at which we can now sell My-Te-Good Coffee, we have discontinued the sale of our Special Blend Coffee.

Here's the REASON WHY

our new low price on My-Te-Good Coffee is possible and why we have quit selling our Special Blend:

All the Coffees Used in Our My-Te-Good Coffee Come From BRAZIL

Coffee, in Brazil, is in a highly chaotic condition—prices are demoralized, everything pertaining to coffee is topsy-turvy and fine Brazilian Coffee is actually being exported for less money than it costs to grow it.

Consequently, being a blend of fine Brazilian Coffees, My-Te-Good can now be sold by us at a price practically as low as that at which we can sell the lesser quality Special Blend, as Special Blend contained some coffee which does not come from Brazil.

HOLMES TALKS ON NEW ROME

The scene of regenerated Rome of Fascimo, under the dictatorship of Mussolini, with its progressive, efficient and westernized features, was presented last night by Burton Holmes in the first of his series of travel talks at the Carnegie Music Hall. The disappearance of slums, widening of streets, landscaping of vast open stretches and the erection of modern apartment houses have all given the Eternal City a new and strange appearance.

Other travel talks in this series, the thirty-eighth by Holmes, include "Oberammergau and the Passion Play of 1930," "The North African Tour," "The Gran Tour of Europe" and "Imperial Abyssinia." The lecturer's pictures, both motion and still, were new and colorful.

EXPERTS HEARD ON UTILITIES VALUATIONS

Different Methods Aired As Probers' Committee Turns to New Fields

HARRISBURG, March 19.—(AP.)—Comparative valuations of water company properties and the wide variations in estimates possible under the reproduction — cost — new — less—depreciation method of determining rate base valuations of utilities were presented to the House Public Service Commission Investigating Committee as this inquiry moved into new fields today.

The complete membership of seven representatives and three Governor's observers was present for the first time as the investigation departed for the present at least from the consideration of electric companies and depreciated book values.

REVIEWS INTRICACIES

Two previous experts employed by the House committee had devoted their testimony largely to considering the over-all returns of electric companies on the basis of book values which is not the basis used by the commission. W. M. Dietrich, Pittsburgh certified public accountant, the third of the committee's technichal staff, was the first to review the intricacies of the standard method of computing rate—base valuations.

Dietrich by means of charts, graphs and statistical exhibits discussed the various elements which permit variations of 100 per cent or more in the estimates of property valuations determined by computing the cost of reproducing the property new and allowing for depreciation. He said one of the most important factors in this system was the period from which the prices are taken in figuring the cost of production. "Intangibles" constitute another factor he explained and include such items as going concern value, omissions and contingencies and legal expenses.

PITTSBURGH CASE

Among the cases included in the 68 which he said the commission had heard during the period of 1921-30 was that of the South Pittsburgh Water Company of Pittsburgh. His chart showed the original cost as $5,838,215 and the "fair value" found by the P. S. C. $7,500,000.

Other cases included these, the first figure being the original cost and the second the "fair value."

Ellwood Water Company, $369,000-$435,000; Waynesburg Water Company, $205,000-$200,000; Water Company of Punxsutawney, $346,514-$460,000; Armstrong Water Company, $218,565-$295,000.

Millionaire, Bride, Slaves of Dope, Lure Alma Back to Drugs

By ALMA RUBENS

CHAPTER XLII

Dope—what was the use of a divorce—what was the use of hope for success in my new play, "Lady Chatterley's Lover," if I could not get out of the clutches of dope?

Like a man fighting to get out of a murderous quicksand began once again my desperate fight.

I had fought and lost, risen to my feet and stumbled back into the mire a hundred times. All right—I'd fight again—and this time I would win—or die!

I took my telephone off the hook. I never answered a knock at the door of my apartment. I didn't leave my room for days and nights, and I began to taper off the dope.

Miss Rubens

When the pains of deprivation started in I bore them as long as I could without screaming, fighting mad.

At the last instant of my endurance I took a sniff of cocaine, or a shot of morphine but these doses were as weak as I could make them.

I lay on the floor most of the time, half conscious—but fighting!—fighting with all the pitiful strength I had left.

I sent out and got some books which had helped me in my last terrific struggles. One of them was a Christian Science manual. I read it over and over, word by word, syllable by syllable.

Mind Broken

I tried to commit some of the helpful lines to memory—but my poor, broken mind could not retain the words.

All I could think of was dope—dope—dope.

One more shot, just one.

I looked through my trunks and found a book written by a well-known astrologer—the woman who has been the rage in New York for the last two or three years.

Could it be that it was something in my stars that had driven me to this desperation?

Perhaps if I understood the stars and interpreted the message they had to give me, I might win—this time.

Half conscious, half delirious, I read, and tried so hard to understand that the sweat stood out on my forehead in great drops.

Sometimes my mind seemed to clear, and the whole sodden confusion of my life appeared to drop from me like a stained and tarred cloak.

I'm coming back. I'm coming back! I'm going to hold up my head. The dark world is turning to sunshine—again!"

"There's hope for me—after all. I'll study the new part. I'll make myself learn it. They say Alma Rubens is gone, she can never come back. I'll show 'em. I'll show 'em!"

'Fighting Fool'

That's what I thought, poor little fool, poor little hoping, praying, fighting fool.

And then I'd get out Lady Chatterley and go over the lines, over and over, and over again. I'd try to throw myself into the part and be what I used to be—an actress.

Once in a while there would come a gleam of the old power, like sunshine pouring into a darkened room, and then all at once my memory would balk. I couldn't think what it was all about.

Lady Chatterley, I thought, who is she, why do I keep repeating her name?

Once, I remember, I woke from a sort of stupor, and saw standing at the foot of my bed a tall, graceful woman with a deep veil concealing her face.

"Who are you?" I cried, in my hoarse voice that was no more like the voice of the real Alma Rubens than a poor cracked bell is like a silver trumpet.

"Who are you, and why do you come here to torment me?"

The figure raised its head.

"Don't you know me?" it said. "I am the one who is going to lead you back to youth and beauty and fame and money, back to your friends, back to love and home, back to the bright world again.

"I am Lady Chatterley."

And the figure raised its concealing veil, and there before me, poor trembling, laughing, crying, shuddering wretch that I was, stood Alma Rubens as she used to be.

Laughing, light-hearted, gay Alma Rubens with the world at her feet, and all the diamonds, pearls and rubies on earth waiting for her to wear them.

Hopes Vanish

Alma Rubens, the little black-eyed girl from California, who was going to be so good to her mother and all her relatives.

Alma," I cried, "Alma, you've come back again! Where have you been all this time?"

I stretched out my arms, but the figure of the veiled woman vanished, and somehow my hope, my desperate, determined hope, vanished with it.

A knock came to the door—I had been ignoring all attempts at any sort of communication for days—I was all alone, all alone, in a world shrouded in black.

If I could only talk to someone, anyone human, anyone but the ghosts and demons that haunted my hours of misery.

I staggered to the door, and threw it open.

On the threshold stood a young millionaire and his beautiful blonde bride.

I had met them both at one of the parties.

"Come in," I cried. "I'm glad to see you. I'm glad. I'm glad!"

And the two dope slaves came in—and my fight was lost again.

Alma Rubens trapped in raid on dope party—Tomorrow she describes her marvelous escape.

Muriel McCormick Will Turn Actress

PALM BEACH, Fla., March 19.—(AP.)—Miss Muriel McCormick, whose dramatic ventures in this fashionable social colony have been attended by much interest, will herself turn actress.

After 10 weeks of managing the Palm Beach Playhouse, Inc., stock company with its tiny theater which seats 293 persons, Miss McCormick announced she would appear in person at a post-season performance scheduled to open March 30.

The Playhouse will present an extra performance of "The Face," by Frances Guinard Gibbs, never before given professionally. Miss McCormick will play the role of Mona Liza of the original famous Di Vinci painting. The play deals with the life of the artist during the time he was painting the picture and with the Last Supper.

2 Plan 'Round-World Hop Within Month

NEW YORK, March 19.—(AP.)—A veteran Seattle air-circus pilot and a wealthy New York aviation enthusiast plan to take off on an around-the-world flight within a month and hope to break the record of the Graf Zeppelin, the A. T. W. Corporation has announced. Clyde E. AWAITS CONFERENCE

That the Governor appreciated the coal and iron police situation needs his close attention was indicated today. The Governor, of course, will await his conference tomorrow on the administration bill, but he will never sign a bill that does not provide for the abolition of the coal and iron police.

Pinchot's views in opposition to the Musmanno bill were reported to be these:

That anyone can hire property guards. No law is needed for that.

The Governor will not tolerate a company-controlled system.

WOULD ACCEPT CHANGE

The administration bill as it stands—and the Governor expressed his willingness to have it amended—puts the expense on the companies, but confines the control and jurisdiction with the state, and the state pays the police direct, the concerns paying a levied amount to the state.

There have been complaints about the powers given to the police under the administration bill, but without police powers there are no policemen.

Perhaps there may be a way to enlarge the present force to care for the situation. The conference at least will bring out many points at issue.

St. Francis Hospital State Fund Halted

HARRISBURG, March 19.—(AP.)—The Dauphin County Court yesterday granted an injunction restraining the state from paying to St. Francis Hospital of Pittsburgh an appropriation given by the 1929 Legislature.

The Constitution Defense League had brought the proceedings on the ground that the hospital was sectarian.

The Legislature appropriated to the hospital $3 a day for medical or surgical service rendered to each patient entitled to free treatment.

Judge Scores Arrest Of Peaceful 'Drunks'

ALEXANDRIA, Va., March 19.—(AP.)—So long as a drunken man keeps the peace, Judge William S. Snow of Police Court thinks he should not be arrested. He so instructed police here in dismissing charges against Bernard Hammill and Roy Beach. They were arrested in a lunch room, but the proprietor had made no complaint against them.

Judge Snow said police should not arrest a man for being drunk when he is not disorderly or making himself obnoxious.

BRIDGE AND DAM APPEAL SENT TO HURLEY

Commissioners See Added Cost in Placing Allegheny Span as U. S. Proposes

County Commissioners have nearly lost hope for the proposed combiration bridge and dam on the Allegheny River near Aspinwall.

The War Department is reported to have plans for a dam, and county officials hoped to get the government's permission to combine the bridge piers with the dam, provided the latter was constructed 1,000 feet downstream from the existing dam.

Col. Jarvis J. Bain, head of the local government engineers' office, has informed the County Commissioners it is not feasible to build the dam nearer than 1,700 feet from the present one.

The County Commissioners yesterday forwarded to Secretary of War P. J. Hirley a letter declaring it would not be economical to build a bridge 1,700 feet down stream from the present dam. They said the additional cost to get a desired grade separation at each end of the proposed bridge would offset any advantage in cost of a combination of bridge piers and dam.

PRIZES AWAIT BEST RECIPES

Only three more days and it'll be too late to take part in the Sun-Telegraph's spaghetti-macaroni contest, for which prizes of $100 and many packages of assorted spaghetti and macaroni will be awarded to the housewives who submit the best recipes for cooking these delicious foods. The contest closes at noon Saturday, and letters that are not in at that hour—well, that's another story.

Hundreds of recipes, some of them better than any that have yet appeared in mother's cook book, have been received by the macaroni-spaghetti editor, who is wondering how he's going to select the winners of the 56 prizes. But don't let that worry you, for editors have a way about them that's puzzling even to the smartest of people. So just send in that recipe and be one of the lucky 56.

Contest Rules

1—Each contestant may submit as many recipes as she wishes, calling for macaroni or spaghetti.
2—A part of the wrapper of a package of any brand must be enclosed with your recipe.

4—Mail recipes to Macaroni Contest Editor, care of the Sun-Telegraph.
5—The contest closes at noon on March 21.
6—The names of the winners will be announced soon after that date. The prize-winning recipes also will be published.

DREW ASKS O. K. FOR $4,600 JOB

The Salary Board will be asked to pass on a request from Superior Court Judge James B. Drew for an appropriation of $4,800 a year to pay the salary of a proposed court stenographer required for "the necessary discharge of duties" in connection with Judge Drew's office.

Judge Drew yesterday submitted a letter to the commissioners stating that an act of Assembly says the county commissioners shall provide funds for judges stenographers. In Allegheny County Judge Drew said the salary of court stenographers is $4,600 a year.

Commissioner C. C. McGovern declared:

"I certainly object, as I think it is an outrage to pay those sharks that amount of money. If a stenographer is provided he should not be paid more than the others employed in the Court House, which is $200 a month. Besides, this request is one for the Salary Board."

County Solicitor M. B. Lesher concurred and the request was referred to the Salary Board.

ROBBERS BEGIN PRISON TERMS

Walter Dudak, 21, of Twelfth street, McKeesport, today began serving 10 to 30 years in Western Penitentiary following his plea of no defense to two robbery charges before visiting Judge William T. Darr, of Jefferson County. Matthew Stanko, 19, of McKeesport, was given four to 20 years in the penitentiary. Dudak had been involved before, but it was Stanko's first offense.

They were charged with robbing Harry B. Hobson, druggist, 1127 Walnut street, McKeesport, of $385 November 2, and with robbing the store of Franke Veres, 12 Superior street, Duquesne, of $53, October 26. The men were placed on trial and part of the evidence taken, before they changed their pleas.

IMMIGRATION CUT FURTHER

WASHINGTON, March 19 — (AP).—Continued decline of immigration to the United States for February was announced by the State Department.

Only 561 visas were issued for the month, compared with 611 in January. The statistics covered 21 nations.

Rigid enforcement by consuls of the administration order prohibiting entry of those likely to become public charges was held responsible for the decrease.

WAR MEMORIAL TO REMAIN

A war memorial tablet commemorating service of several hundred World War veterans will not be removed from Warrington avenue playgrounds to McKinley Park, as requested by the Hilltop Memorial Post No. 438, Veterans of Foreign Wars, and other organizations of that section.

Representatives of the post appeared before City Council yesterday at a public hearing and said the post had agreed to withdraw its previous demand for the removal.

A spokesman said the post reconsidered and felt that the memorial should remain in its present location, because it marked the center of the section and was the spot from which many men of the Warrington avenue district marched off to war. As a result Council took no action on the matter.

The response to the letter inviting the city's brokers to attend a sales conference to be held by Guy W. DEATH THREAT WRITER SOUGHT

SAN DIEGO, Cal., March 19.—(INS.)—In a determined effort to prevent a counterpart of the brutal Virginia Brooks murder, authorities today were hunting the writer of an anonymous letter who admitted slaying the Brooks child and threatened to kill another schoolgirl.

The new death letter was received shortly after a crudely-scrawled note, signed "The Doctor," was found.

Police refused to reveal the contents of the second threatening letter, but announced the child said to be marked for death is being guarded closely, according to Police Chief A. S. Hill.

"The Doctor" boasted in the first letter he had executed a "perfect crime" when he killed the 10-year-old girl on her way to school.

Lieut. George Sears, in charge of the hunt for the murderer, regarded the two letters as being the work of the actual slayer.

GIRL, 17, HELD IN STILL RAID

SOMERSET, Pa., March 19.—(AP.)—Miss Ella Smith, 17, was held in jail here as the outgrowth of a raid by county and state officers on a still on a nearby farm. The officers said the girl was found in the farm building in which the still was being operated.

While the raid was in progress, officers reported, a man who gave his name as Harry F. Smith drove up to the place in an automobile. Search of his automobile was said to have revealed a five-gallon keg of whisky. He was held.

The raiders confiscated two stills, of 25-gallon and 10-gallon capacity, and 13 gallons of whisky, and destroyed 200 gallons of mash, they reported.

To Break Up a Cold In a Jiffy

Take two tablets now.

Better almost before you know it.

Feel Like a New Person In Just a Little While

People have found out that new-fangled ideas and notions don't break up colds. So millions have turned back to first principles and use what they know breaks one up in a jiffy. Even a "little" cold is too dangerous to trifle with.

The thing to do is to get Hill's Cascara Quinine at any drug store. Take two tablets now. Then follow directions on box. Drink lots of water, too—that's all.

Soon you'll start to feel like a new person. Things will loosen up, your head will clear; aching go—you'll be back on the job with a wallop.

Get Hill's now. It is a scientific formula made to do one thing well; to knock a cold — not to cure a thousand ailments. Get your money back if it doesn't work with twice the speed of anything else you've ever tried.

Real Locomotive, Model '72, In Jules Verne Drama Here Next Week

By GEORGE SEIBEL

Jules Verne is probably the most popular French author outside of Alexandre Dumas, and "The Mysterious Island" is the best story for boys ever written. But Verne has been left far behind by the advance of science, and "Around the World in 80 Days," which was considered a speed record 60 years ago, has recently been repeated in 37 days.

George Seibel

Yet there are going to be thrills enough when the old melodrama is revived at the "Y" Playhouse in Bellefield next week. Iden Payne, who put it on recently at the Goodman Memorial Theater in Chicago, is directing the production here and will play the hero.

Verne made a specialty of scientific fiction. Whatever he put into his romances—automobile, submarine or airplane—he proved scientifically possible. He resented the insinuation that he was using his imagination.

Now he is honored as a sort of scientific seer. Most of his dreams have come true. His grandson was recently called on to dedicate the submarine of Sir Hubert Wilkins, to be used for polar exploration, and called the Nautilus, like the undersea craft in Verne's famous romance, "Twenty Thousand Leagues Under the Sea."

Some day a rocket will reach the moon and then everything Verne visioned will be everyday commonplace.

BIS STAGE SPECTACLES

Aside from being a prolific novelist Verne provided the stage with some of its most gorgeous spectacles. Michael Strogoff was one of them. "Around the World in 80 Days" was played in all the capitals of Europe after its first production in 1872.

In writing the melodrama Verne had the collaboration of Adolphe D'Ennery, author of that other famous old-time thriller, "The Two Orphans."

In those days railroad trains and shipwrecks were the climax of stage realism. Iden Payne has built, with the assistance of Frank Stout as chief engineer, a locomotive of the 1872 model which will dash madly across the stage of the "Y" next week in the effort to win the bet of Phileas Fogg.

But that railroad train, which is held up by wild Indians in the canyons of Colorado, isn't all. There is the good ship Henrietta, which bursts its boilers and spills the heroes into the briny waves.

Whether those waves will be canvas, painted blue and shaken by muscular stage hands from the wings, with others under the waves throwing handfuls of salt in the air for spray, remains to be seen. Real waves were always canvas in those days.

PLENTY OF ADVENTURES

Not only Indians and white slavers, but a variety of barbarians and savages will populate the 14 scenes of the grand spectacle at the Playhouse next Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday.

They will dash across through the jungle to save a Hindu widow from being burnt on the funeral pyre of her husband. "Suttee" has gone out of fashion, but Verne wrote in 1872.

They will sing ballads of Jesse James in saloons of San Francisco. There are no more saloons now, we are told, and Jesse James was a mere piker who had no notion of the higher possibilities of modern politics.

They will encounter perils of fire and water, the immortal Fogg and his valet Passepartout, that will make the audience gasp. It was thought that Verne's 80 days were impossible until Nelly Bly and Elizabeth Bisland proved it could be done. And next week at the "Y" Playhouse Iden Payne and Frank Stout are going to prove it all over again, with a real choo-choo train and waves oh so wild.

Portrait of a Man Talking to Himself

I always miss the most fun . . . I should have been at the Eugene O'Neill "plagiarism" trial Monday . . . To hear George Jean Nathan swap sass with his cross-examiner, George having volunteered himself as a witness for his friend, O'Neill . . . The Telly reporter made Nathan look silly in his account of the proceedings, but the Sun's and the Journal's accounts reveal the critic as a calm and clever witness . . . As one would suspect he would be . . . The Telly reporter was being a little too cute, I imagine. . . . Cohalan, the lawyer for the woman suing O'Neill for "infringing" on her manuscript, tried to rattle Nathan, and was rebuked by the judge . . . For his irrelevant arguments and "wasting the court's time" . . . When Nathan said something about good English, Cohalan snapped: "Oh, so you set yourself up as a judge of sound English, do you?" . . . To which the witness indifferently replied: "Yes" . . . A little awed by the presence of so esteemed a reviewer, the ham in the lawyer got the best of him. . . . He wanted expert opinion, apparently . . . "How many first rate critics," asked Cohalan, "would you say there are in America?" . . . "Literary or dramatic?" queried Nathan . . . "Does that make any difference?" asked Cohalan . . . Nathan said that there were about 20 first-raters . . . "Indeed?" was the sarcastic response. "I always thought that there was only one!" . . . "A lot of people seem to think so," Nathan stiffly replied, as he brushed his sleeve.

The most interesting discussion, it seems, was chronicled by the reporters . . . During the questioning Cohalan tried to belittle the snappy apparel of the critic . . . He wanted to know why Nathan's coat featured two breast pockets . . . Nathan wears his handkerchief in the right pocket, while most lads wear theirs in the left . . . "I learned a long time ago," explained Nathan, "that it was best for my cigars" . . . This aroused the curiosity of His Honor and Cohalan, both of whom later had quite an earnest talk with Nathan about saving cigars from being smashed . . . The trial will cost O'Neill over $25,000, whether he wins or loses . . . Nathan probably will do a magazine article on his courtroom adventure, the title of which ought to be "Testimony of a Critic," to paraphrase the name of his new book . . . It is customary with the Chinese to cure a critic by giving him responsibility.

The story about the gorgeous blonde second maid who was too beautiful to remain in the employ of the Walter Wangers (Justine Johnstone) is one for the book . . . When the Paramount movie executive came home one evening and he saw the new second maid, a 19-year-old blonde Norwegian, he almost swooned . . . Never, in all his life, he said, had he seen such beauty, such radiance, such charm . . . And her figure! . . . His wife was one of Mr. Ziegfeld's most gorgeous and she still is an eyeful, but this new maid! . . . He told Mrs. Wanger that the girl had to be fired . . . He couldn't remain in the same house with so beautiful a person . . . "It would be awful," cooed Justine, "to fire her. Can't you give her some letters?" . . . Wanger wrote a few letters and explained to the girl that she was too lovely to dust things and wait on people. . . . He sent her to Ziegfeld . . . She will be his most beautiful showgirl in the next "Follies" . . . I wonder why, however, Wanger didn't sign her for Paramount?

It must be grand being in your 'teens, and free from sophistication . . . Like some lads and lassies I encounter now and then . . .

NEW FILM AND STAGE PROGRAMS SCHEDULED

Glenn Anders originated his present role of Ned Darrell in "Strange Interlude," coming to the Nixon for a return engagement next Monday. He made his professional debut with Sothern and Marlowe. He later appeared in "Just Around the Corner," "Scrambled Wives," "The Demi-Virgin," "Hell Bent Fer Heaven," and several other plays done in New York.

Aileen Stanley, songstress, who was to have appeared with Dick Powell in his "Second Anniversary Revue," beginning here tomorrow in the Stanley, is ill in New York and will not be in Pittsburgh as scheduled. She will come at a later date.

In "June Moon," opening tomorrow on the Penn screen, Jackie Oakie plays the part of the boob-like song writer. The film is a version of the stage play by Ring Lardner and George S. Kaufman.

James Hall, leading man of the films, will appear in person in the Enright, beginning tomorrow. The picture will be "Woman Hungry," with Lila Lee, Sidney Blackmer, Fred Kohler and Raymond Hatton.

"Lonely Wives," with Edward Everett Horton, Esther Ralston, Laura LaPlante and Patsy Ruth Miller, will open in both the Fulton and Sheridan Square theaters tomorrow. It is a farce comedy.

FILMS HELD OVER

"The Last Parade," gangster melodrama, will open a second week in the Warner next Monday. Jack Holt, Constance Cummings and Tom Moore head the cast.

Charlie Chaplin's film, "City Lights," will begin its third week in the Aldine tomorrow.

Cooper's International "Black and White Revue," with a cast of 70, will open in the Academy with a midnight show Sunday.

Sunkist Eddie Nelson, comedian, will headline the vaudeville coming to the Davis Saturday. The screen will offer "Not Exactly Gentlemen," with Victor McLaglen.

"Naughty Flirt," with Alice White, Paul Page and Myrna Loy, is the film attraction coming to the Harris Saturday. The story concerns itself with the collegiate set.

Fred Sullivan, who played the French priest in George Sharp's earlier presentation of "Seventh Heaven" in the Pitt, is now in Pittsburgh and will play the same role in the presentation here next week. Anne Forrest will again appear in the role of Diane, which won her fame on the road a few seasons ago.

Hollywood Film Cameras Put Newspaper Life In Limelight

By HARRISON CARROLL.

(Copyright, 1931, by Premier Syndicate.)

HOLLYWOOD, March 19.

At the rate things are going, every actor in Hollywood will soon be able to say that he was a newspaperman once himself.

Fox is the latest studio to plan a picture about the press. Following the example of "Five Star Final," it will lambast the tabloids. Bradley King, one of Hollywood's more competent scenarists, has been assigned to write the story, and William McGrath, ex-tabloid reporter, will act as adviser.

Newspaper stories are the current rage. First National is to do "Five Star Final." Joan Crawford was a sob-sister in "Dance Fools, Dance," Lewis Ayres will be a reporter in one of his new vehicles, and, of course, there is "The Front Page," which was previewed last week. Incidentally, it is a bang-up production, another feather in the cap of Lewis Milestone, director of last year's prize picture, "All Quiet on the Western Front."

Lewis Milestone

It is interesting to note that a local theater chain is considering "The Front Page" for one of its long-run houses. Theater men figure everybody will want to see how Milestone got around the forbidden profanity in the play.

LATEST GOSSIP

The report persists that Cecil B. De Mille will go to Paramount as an associate producer. His Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer contract is up with the completion of "The Squaw Man" . . . Frances Marion, the scenarist, and George Hill, the director, have kissed and made up. They were the team who contributed "The Big House," and who will be represented again in "The Secret Six." . . . Samuel Goldwyn's small son is recovering from the measles . . . Two days was the limit of Jean Harlow's visit to the Gay White Way. She was summoned back to do retakes on an M. G. M. film . . . A group of scenarists who used to work steadily before the days of the talkies are planning an appeal to the Motion Picture Academy of Arts and Sciences to see if anything can be done to remind producers of their former successes . . . After all, there will be no love interest in the Tilden tennis shorts. Exhibiting good common sense, M. G. M. has decided to limit them to instructive tennis, with normal and slow motion photography . . . Recovered from a siege of pneumonia, Herbert Brenon returns to the RKO lot to start casting "The Next Corner" . . . Several studios are undergoing a change of heart about color films. By the middle of next month, Paramount expects to start the first of a series of Technicolor productions. They will be dramas . . . As a favor to Fox executives, El Brendel will appear in two scenes of "Riding for a Fall."

That young student, for instance . . . It was about 1 o'clock the other morning . . . I was rounding the 54th street corner of 6th avenue where Mr. Ziegfeld window-displays several huge and beautiful photos of his most charming ladies . . . The hatless but determined young man was toying with a tiny camera on a tripod. . . . The camera was the sort you might put in your vest pocket. . . . He pressed a tiny flashlight against the window—then stepped back or closer to make sure that he had the correct focus . . . The camera was nearly against the window pane and focused directly on a picture of Gertrude Dahl . . . "What's the big idea?" I busybodied . . . He grinned, then sheepishly replied: "I want her for my album" . . . I ankled along . . . Envious of his unsophistication . . . He must get such a wallop out of things—and people. . . . Too many of us who get our pictures or names in the papers are rude to hunters of our autographs . . . When we should feel complimented that they even want them.

The Argonaut Club certainly is alive with news . . . So many Broadway things seem to happen there . . . The British tennis champion, who is said to have once trimmed Tilden, is its newest steady patron . . . Night after night he ringsides it there, either with this phrail or that one . . . The cuties in the show would have you believe he has proposed marriage to almost all of them. . . . The other night one of the gals said she had married him secretly that day . . . But he denied it vigorously . . . "Please don't print that," he urged. "I am already married" . . . Jean Malin, the club's star, startled the locals and the press when he married recently . . . It was startling because he didn't seem to be "the type" . . . Now he will break in the rags again with another sensational yarn . . . Some woman will sue him for breach of promise . . . He is so thrilled about it . . . It will keep the night loafers wondering, he feels . . . He is having his day . . . He is a Broadway celebrity . . . He is one of the Broadway pillars. . . . But his caricature isn't on the Sardi walls!

Aside to "Pop," the music critic . . . My error: There are two numbers tagged "The King's Horses" . . . It couldn't have been more than seven months ago when that pretty thing from the South first came to New York . . . Some of the wisenheimers told her then that girls fade quickly on Broadway—and to be a goody. . . . The other night her charm wasn't there, anymore . . . Her clothes needed pressing . . . Her hair had no sparkle . . . She was drunk . . . Later, they told me it was because she "hadn't had a job for months!" . . . Two tables away sat a newcomer to Broadway . . . She commences a night club engagement tonight. . . . She is what the boys would call "jail-bait," so young is she. . . . Her beauty will attract the boys who are always on the alert for a new face . . . There will be feuds over her—in time . . . And then she will discover her power . . . I'd like to see her two years hence . . . I wonder.

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

Billie Burke has expressed her intention of making a tour as a crusader to restore "the road" and bring back the "one-night stands" of the good old theatrical days, as Ethel Barrymore has been doing and as Mrs. Fiske, Jane Cowl and Grace George are said to be preparing to do. Many will hope that these members of the weaker sex do not weaken.

May Dowling, one of the prominent feminine disciples of theatrical press agentry, submitted the following to The Quill, organ of their organization:

"How do you like your new publicity agent?" asked the star's friend."

"Oh, he's wonderful," she cried, beaming with enthusiasm. "We've been robbed twice, our house has been burned, our car has been wrecked, and I have had my life threatened by an anonymous enemy since we employed him."

The Marquis de la Falaise, Gloria Swanson's ex, is in charge of French language production of Radio Pictures in Hollywood. When and if you see any movies in Paree next summer be sure to get the genuine article—look for the trade marquis.

The present season is the first since before the Civil War that there has been no "Uncle Tom's Cabin" show on the road. Perhaps Little Eva finally died of old age.

Otis Skinner, recently seen here in "Marius," closed in Chicago after six weeks on the road. Hard roads are fine for automobiles, but not for such vehicles as "Marius."

Old English Preparation For Catarrh, Catarrhal Deafness and Head Noises

If you know someone who is troubled with head noises, or catarrhal deafness, cut out this paragraph, and hand it to them, and you may have been the means of saving some poor sufferer perhaps from total deafness. We believe that catarrh, catarrhal deafness, head noises, etc., are caused by constitutional disease, and that salves, sprays, inhalers, etc., merely temporize with the complaint, and seldom, if ever, give permanent relief. This being so, much time has been spent in perfecting a pure, gentle, yet effective tonic, that should quickly dispel all traces of the catarrhal poison from the system. The effective prescription which was eventually formulated is given below in an understandable form, so that any one can use it in their own home at little expense.

Secure from May-Liggett's or your druggist one ounce of Parmint (Double Strength). Take this home and add to it ¾ pint of hot water and a little granulated sugar; stir until dissolved. Take one tablespoonful four times a day.

The first dose should begin to relieve the distressing head noises, headache, dullness, cloudy thinking, etc., while the hearing should rapidly return as the system is invigorated by the tonic action of the treatment. Loss of smell and mucus dropping in the back of the throat are other symptoms that show the presence of catarrhal poison and which are often overcome by this efficacious treatment. If nearly nine-ty per cent of all ear troubles are directly caused by catarrh, there must be many people whose hearing may be restored by this simple home treatment.

Every person who is troubled with head noises, catarrhal deafness, or catarrh, should give this mixture a trial.

World Famous COMMANDER
with free wheeling

EVEN without Free Wheeling, Studebaker's world famous Commander Eight would still be the biggest value for the money in America.

The Commander is a car of generous wheelbase—124 inches—a comfort further enhanced by Studebaker's famous ball bearing spring suspension.

The Commander engine develops 101 certified horsepower—the greatest power per cubic inch, with two exceptions, to be found in any American motor car. The two exceptions are the engines of cars costing, roughly, $1000 and $3000 more than The Commander!

Commander performance and comfort thus form an ideal natural background for the joy, the economy and the safety of Free Wheeling.

Free Wheeling with positive gear control, as introduced by Studebaker and adopted, unchanged, by Pierce-Arrow and Lincoln, gives you silent gear shifting at all speeds—freedom from clutch-pushing—12 to 20 per cent proved gasoline and oil saving—incomparably restful, zestful motoring—and the added safety attested by public traffic officials from coast to coast.

One drive will convince you there is no value comparable to this seasoned Eight by Studebaker, Pioneer and Pacemaker. May we place a Commander Eight at your disposal?

The Commander Eight Four-door Sedan is $1585 at the factory. Other Commander Eight models range in price from $1585 to $1730 at the factory. Bumpers and spare tires extra.

NEW TYPE 'MIKE' IN 'WOZZECK' PREMIERE

WE NOW PRESENT

By DARRELL V. MARTIN,
Radio Editor

Anne Roselle

The radio world turns its eyes to Philadelphia tonight to see and hear what can be done with the new parabolic microphone. Engineers revolutionary in its construction this sound amplifier resembles a kitchen kettle. Engineers say it is sensitive enough to reproduce faithfully the weakest note in the opera "Wozzeck" when the great conductor Leopold Stokowski leads 152 skilled musicians in its American premiere at the Philadelphia Opera House. The parabolic operates on the principle of the searchlight and is capable of either "flooding" the stage or concentrating at one point in a beam as for solo parts. When Anne Roselle sings "Marie" in the second act broadcast on WCAE at 9 one of these new microphones will be pointed at her in exactly the same manner you would focus a camera in taking a picture. When the chorus sings the focus will be enlarged.

Meanwhile KDKA experiments with a new type German microphone that resembles Aladdin's lamp. One rub and it picks up the blink of an eyelash.

Truthfully, it is exceptionally sensitive. It is made of aluminum. Only four in this country—the other three at NBC in New York.

QUESTION A DAY:

In trans-Atlantic broadcasts there is always a swishing sound like the rise and fall of waves. Is this really the ocean?—Mrs. Arthur S. Hazelwood.

Answer—It is not exactly the sound of ocean waves but an electrical condition in the ether induced by the waves. We may hear KFI, Los Angeles, without this noise, because the signals traverse land only. Signals coming from G5SW at Chelmsford, England—a slightly greater distance—are distorted by the action of water currents.

Girls are 3-to-1 favorites over boys in the WBBM spelling bee.

"Would 20 words suffice to tell the story of cigars in the Arthur Pryor Band broadcast?" asked the manufacturers of a group of psychologists throughout the country. Most of the savants answered in less than 20 words that that would be plenty of smoke.

WOR sound effects men who create oceans in five minutes' time were balked the other night when it came time to reproduce the rattle of a street car. It is the ONE sound that has never been created over the air.

* * *

In the same drama two high school boys skated round and round over a mat, giving a perfect illusion of an elevated train.

"Old Timer" in Aspinwall pens us that the town has experienced a real estate boom since our item forecasting that KQV might locate its new transmitter out that way. Property has gone up plenty, but it appears now that KQV will locate somewhere else. There is a report also that KQV may merge with Pittsburgh police for a 50-50 assortment of crime news and concert.

Kate Smith, WJZ, 11:30, is crooning her way into the hearts of thousands.

Paul Miller's characters of "Skippy and Ray" recently passed audition at WLW.

No wonder it's Pennsylvania's fastest Gasoline Success!

IN ALL the world, today, there are no proving grounds for motor fuel quite like the Standard Laboratories at Bayway, New Jersey.

Here gasoline is literally "put on the rack." Tested and tortured! Made to give up its every secret. Not only "Standard"—but every gasoline that you can buy on the highway today.

For this laboratory has been given one job above all others . . . to see that "Standard" is always better gasoline.

Vast resources and long experience count in gasoline-making as in everything else. That is why "Standard" Gasoline, today, is the most widely used motor fuel in the entire East. Why in the two years since it was introduced into Pennsylvania it has swept from one end of the state to the other.

As to the facts about "Standard"—here they are:

A completely distilled, clean gasoline. A gasoline that contains no sulphides (you can tell them by the smell!) to damage your motor. No gum to foul pistons. No "heavy ends" to cause crankcase dilution. "Standard" Gasoline is made with extra volatility to insure quicker starting in any weather and pickup under any traffic conditions. In anti-knock qualities, it is well above the average of all the gasolines except those selling at a premium.

Fill up with "Standard" today—and judge the results for yourself.

Refined by the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey and marketed exclusively in Pennsylvania by the STANDARD OIL COMPANY OF PENNSYLVANIA

The Loudspeaker -:- By LOUIS REID

NEW YORK, March 19.—There are 6,000,000 fewer listeners in the summer than in the months when the home fires are burning, according to the statisticians in Washington.

The call of the concrete and the old spade mashies, they say, are responsible. Are the lords of the loudspeakers downhearted? Not so you could notice it, my dear Secretary of Commerce. Their schedules are never more crowded than in the summer months. Money may not be talking then as convincingly since several of the more profligate commercial sponsors cease broadcasting, but the microphone men have their restless eyes on the arena and do not care.

Promoters of the more important bouts still regard radio with hostility, though much of their opposition has been subdued by the persuasive eloquence of the broadcasters. I cannot recall that the armchair army has been deprived of a first-class bout since the advent of network broadcasting. Here again money talks. The microphonic rights to a big bout are disposed for a sum that compensates for any loss at the box office occasioned by a broadcast.

It is still a serious doubt with this department whether a fight broadcast vitally affects the turnstiles. If the ballhoo in the newspapers is effective—and it invariably is—the microphone has little bearing on the gate receipts. So persistent, so exciting is the drum-beating that the biggest temptations in Madison Square Garden, or in Chicago or Philadelphia can no more be resisted by those within access to the arena than Ringling Brothers' circus can be resisted in, say, Waterloo, Ia.

* * *

Park Avenue will not attain its fullest glory until it is celebrated in song. Strange, the delay of the melody men!

Our call for a vacation for Wagner's "Ride of the Valkyries" is herebe rescinded on those occasions that Toscanini deigns to draw it out of his baton. Toscanini played it last Sunday—and played it with an intoxicating fervor that was never apparent in its previous airings. It was worth writing Stokowski about. Jenkins, fetch me a stamp.

Graceful wisecracking on the air is becoming less and less audible. There is no fine average struck between solemn dignity and the cheap gagging of those persons who occasionally introduce song numbers.

The overlords of the American Academy of Arts and Letters would seem to be to blame. In stressing dictions they appear to have lost sight of humor and human interest. They have conveyed this attitude to the announcers. The latter, with a few exceptions, are becoming more and more pompous.

Speakers concerned with paying tribute continue to agitate the air. Tribute-paying moods, of course, never make enemies. They seldom make friends, either—among the ear-cuppers. Ear-cuppers like to hear attacks. They like to hear a spade called by its right name. That is why today they are so attentive to the radio talks of the Rev. Charles E. Coughlin. He speaks right out in meeting—and lets the chips fall where they may. The same characteristic is possessed by ex-Senator James A. Reed.

In their hunt for ear excitement the broadcasters are not seemingly any closer to the detective bureaus of the big cities. With the republic more responsive to detective fiction than any other kind, it seems strange that the radio men have not been more active in leading the more successful ferrets of crime to the microphones. And the ferrets might include district attorneys. There ought to be a good story—several good stories—in William T. Jerome.

And let us have, too, if it's possible, the man-hunters of that most picturesque of all police shelters, Scotland Yard.

Musical directors no longer have any qualms about including Tschaikowsky and the hoedowns of the countryside on the same program.

More words have been written about Amos 'n' Andy than any other figures of radio.

Some New Monkeyshines

By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER

our exact status until Deadly Fumes explained:

"If we find the monkey you're to be a character witness."

Absence of the principal ape resulted in a fiasco. You can't hold any trial without the corpus delicious. Or some Latin label like that.

If the trial had lasted another week we would have been picking up coconuts with our feet.

And now it looks as if we all must go back to Dayton, Tenn., again for the second trial of man versus his ancestors. And the only good detail we remember about the first trial is that we escaped.

Europe is happier than a stumble-bum at a barbecue because American bankers will soon start lending money to that lost continent.

We got out of the habit a few years ago. After Europe developed that good old ratio what's-mine-is-mine-and-what's-yours-is-mine-too.

When it came time to collect it was like reaching for the moon with Doug Fairbanks.

But when our bankers can lend deep dishes of gravy to Europe it is a sign. It shows that we have snapped out of that last healthy reaction and are on the mend.

The only thing that worries us is the date of the next European trench picnic.

Looks bad. They've been signing too many peace treaties over there. France and Italy just inked up a beautiful blot that calls for France to have a bigger navy than Italy.

We don't know where Mussolini was at the time they plastered the international signatures on the last treaty. If he was a smart man he would eat at his desk. Too many things happen when you are out to lunch.

World politics right now are like the old Mississippi River poker game. The smart player chewed tobacco and expectorated on the table because it was dangerous to turn your head a second.

This naval treaty is the reason why American bankers have confidence in European futures. Which indicates implicit faith in treaties. Which is just as authoritative as the information you get picking the petals off of daisies.

America depends on world peace. But we've been spanked with the olive branch before.

Unfortunately, the lamp of experience is only a tail light.

It never illuminates the road in front. We hope that this last peace treaty is not another one of those 60-day notes.

If American bankers are going to lend more money to Europe we are willing to become an undesirable alien. The last time we went to consult a banker on the possibilities of raising the mortgage off the garage he handed us the soap and we both took a bath in red ink.

May Use Fire Hose To Rout Starlings

WHEELING, W. Va., March 19 (AP).—A flock of thousands of English starlings which settled in the business district Tuesday night returned to roost at dusk yesterday, dashing hopes of city officials that they had departed.

Officials said that should the birds prolong their unwelcome visit the fire department might attempt to drive them away with streams of water.

Five other ingredients in ACIDINE neutralize burning acid, soothe irritated stomach lining, stop gas and headache from acidity. No other known remedy contains this scientific combination to end acid stomach.

Physicians are prescribing ACIDINE. Thousands of people have found it the only relief from acid indigestion and dyspepsia, gas, pain, heartburn, coated tongue, bad taste, dizziness, fullness, short breath and other troubles from acid stomach. Pain goes like a flash.

Fight on Crafton Mine Fire That Ended Last Night With Charge of City Fund Waste

BIG SHOVEL, HEAVY CATERPILLAR TRUCK IN USE IN FIGHT ON THE M'SHANE MINE FIRE

Heavy equipment used by the contractor paid by the city to fight fire in abandoned McShane mine, near the Crafton Borough line. A ditch 50 feet wide and 40 feet deep was being dug, so Crafton, charging waste, withdrew its financial support and work stopped last night.

HOW THE FIGHT ON THE BURNING MINE, LABELED A NUISANCE, WAS CARRIED ON

A ditch as wide as this one is needless work, Webster Hinnau, Crafton Borough engineer, charged in recommending a narrow ditch that could be dug with a clamshell bucket. Crafton Borough had agreed to pay one-third of the cost to the city, had set $3,333.34 as the limit.

BIG UTILITY OUTLAY FIXED

Philadelphia Company and Subsidiaries Will Expend Sum on Construction

Appropriation of $14,028,096 for construction work here by the Philadelphia Company and its subsidiaries was announced today by the Byllesby Engineering and Management Corporation. The total budget for 1931, as announced by Halford Erickson, vice president in charge of Byllesby operation, is $45,068,951. The Philadelphia Company receives the largest share in the allocation to 11 different enterprises scattered throughout the West and Middle West.

Practically the entire sum allocated to the Philadelphia Company will be spent in the Greater Pittsburgh district.

To the Duquesne Light Company goes the greater part of the $14,028,951 appropriation. Plans for 1931 provide for the expenditure of $8,662,140 on improvements and extensions to existing distribution and transmission lines in Pittsburgh and the district immediately surrounding the city and improvements to operating headquarters, substations and power stations.

TRAILS POWER PLANT

This comes on the heels of the completion last year of the James H. Reed power station on Brunots Island, at a total cost of $10,000,000.

There will be no particular outstanding project undertaken by the Duquesne Light Company, all of the $8,662,140 going for general improvement and extension work.

The Equitable Gas Company receives $1,777,210 of the Philadelphia Company's share, and this sum will be spent principally for drilling new wells in Western Pennsylvania fields, laying necessary field lines, extending of distribution mains for new developments and necessary service and meter connections.

The Pittsburgh Railways Company will spend $1,962,291 on capital improvements and renewals.

BUDGET LISTED

The remainder of the local budget, $1,626,455, will be expended for improvements and extensions by the other subsidiaries of the Philadelphia Company. These include the Allegheny County Steam Heating Company, Harwick Coal and Coke Company, Pittsburgh Motor Coach Company and Beaver Valley Traction Company.

Disbursement of the $45,068,951 total budget was announced by the Byllesby corporation as follows:

SIDEWALKS —of— PITTSBURGH

By William Pfarr

Jack Lally, the late detective, was one of the best men in the business for remembering faces.

William Pfarr

About 10 years ago, the detectives were trying to capture a prowler in the Squirrel Hill district. Night after night houses were being entered and looted. Detectives were ordered to patrol the district. A good description was given by persons who had seen the prowler. Finally, about 3 o'clock one morning Lally took a street car for his home. On the car he saw a man who resembled the prowler. He took a chance and took him into custody. For three days Lally did everything in his power to have the prowler confess. A dozen persons were summoned to identify him but were unable to make a positive identification as none ever got a good look at him.

While in jail the prisoner sent out and ordered his meals. At every meal he would order a double portion of apple pie. One day Lally noticed how well he liked apple pie and a chance remark revealed that the prowler would rather have apple pie than anything else to eat. Lally ordered the sergeant to cut the apple pie off the menu.

Two days elapsed and the prowler begged for pie. He pleaded with Lally for his favorite pie, but Lally refused.

Two more days followed and finally the prisoner asked to see Lally.

"I'll tell you what I'll do, Lally," the prisoner said. "If you let me have a couple of pieces of pie I'll tell you something."

Lally immediately ordered a whole apple pie. Placing the pie outside the cell, he allowed the prisoner to look at it for a couple of hours.

The prowler could not endure the torture any longer and again called Lally. He admitted some 30 house jobs not only in the Squirrel Hill district, but in other parts of the city. Lally, after getting a signed confession, gave the prisoner the pie. The apple pie had the same effect on the prowler as dope would for a hop head. The man could not resist or be deprived of pie.

And now they're telling about the politician who hired a room in a downtown hotel a few nights ago. Just before he retired a friend dropped in.

"I see," said the friend, "that Bill English, the councilman, has been in to see you."

"No," denied the politician, "he hasn't. What makes you think he has?"

"This," the visitor said, pointing to the ever-present contribution of the Gideons.

Norman Borland, one of the head men in Traffic Court, insists that a harmless label on a whisky bottle almost ruined the home of a Pittsburgh jewelry salesman.

The salesman had been to an anti-Volstead party downtown and, too tired to go home, had spent the night at the Pittsburgher Hotel.

In the morning he left the hotel and quickly obtained two of those two-ounce bottles of whisky to repair his hangover. The two-ouncers were supposed to be "William Penn Whisky," as the label said.

After the salesman told his wife he had spent the night at the Pittsburgher, she found the small whisky bottles, noted the label, and exclaimed:

"John, you know very well you weren't at the Pittsburgher. You were at the William Penn. This proves it."

Man Found in Alley Dies in Hospital

Found lying in an alley at the rear of 3335 Juliet street, Oakland, a man who police believe was Con Donahue, 45, address unknown, died early today in Homeopathic Hospital. Cerebral Hemorrhage Causes Boy's Death

The coroner's office today had on record the death of a 12-year-old boy from a cerebral hemorrhage, a cause which rarely occurs to children.

The victim, John H. Montgomery, 12, of 4 Norma street, Crafton, died in his home last night. The hemorrhage was believed to have resulted from sleeping sickness with which the boy had been afflicted four years ago.

CLEAN-UP JOB DRIVE OPENS

The advisory council of the 1931 "Clean Up-Paint Up-Plant Up" campaign of the Chamber of Commerce, in an effort to improve the unsightly conditions of Pittsburgh's wharves, hillsides and vacant properties, yesterday instituted a movement to have these improvements done by the jobless during the clean up drive, April 26 to May 9.

Among the speakers who urged the movement were Charles J. Caspar, of the Pittsburgh Plate Glass Company; Adam Daum, of the chamber's paint and varnish council; Sidney Teller, of the Irene Kaufmann Settlement; Frank Duggan, representing the Western Pennsylvania Safety Council; Hubbs Weimer, official of the Allegheny Building and Loan Association, and Fire Chief Richard L. Smith.

Five hundred dollars in cash prizes and awards will be distributed by the chamber to schools which turn in the best reports of activities during the drive, according to Donald Howard, secretary of the clean-up drive.

Coroner Records Death of Namesake

Deputy Coroner Robert Newman, on duty at the county morgue last night, recorded the death of a namesake.

The victim, Robert Newman, 44, of California, Pa., no relation, came in contact with a high tension wire at the mines of the Vesta Coal Company, at Vestaburg, where he was employed as an electrician, according to the report. Toxemia which resulted caused his death in South Side Hospital.

DRYS SEIZE CAR, BEER, 3 HELD

Arrested while he was alleged to have been transporting five cases of beer in an automobile at Main street and Liberty avenue last night, Ralph R. Hart, 35, of 2039 Plainview avenue, was awaiting a hearing today before the United States Commissioner.

Each of the cases contained 24 pints, agents said. The automobile and contraband was taken to the government warehouse.

A 100-gallon still was reported seized in a raid on a building at 1207 Penn avenue. Nobody was found in the place.

Fifty gallons of moonshine and 150 pints of home brew were confiscated, agents reported, in a dwelling at 1219 Mulberry way, where Leo Monticon, 40, and Mrs. Naomi Monticon, were arrested.

At 1147 Mulberry way, seizure of home brew and moonshine was reported, but no arrests were made.

Lucilla Lawson, 30, Negro, same address, was arrested by police, accused of hurling the lye.

MY EXPERIENCES IN THE WORLD WAR

By JOHN J. PERSHING

Commander-in-Chief, American Expeditionary Forces

Succeeding chapters of "My Experiences in the World War" will appear daily and Sunday exclusively in the Sun-Telegraph.

CHAPTER LXVII.

The system of defensive positions prepared by the Germans along the Western Front and farther back toward Germany consisted of four distinct lines extending from Metz to the northwest. These lines were widely separated near their greatest dip toward Paris, but converged as they approached that portion of the front protecting the communications which were the objective of the American Army in the Meuse-Argonne offensive.

Rapid concentration of the large force required for the battle was most urgent, and even before the beginning of the St. Mihiel offensive troops of some of the services were en route. At the end of the first day's fighting at St. Mihiel the success of the attack was assured, and as prearranged, I immediately directed the transfer of certain combat troops from that battle field to the Meuse-Argonne region.

Gen. Pershing

Army reserves, corps reserves and all spare artillery were moving by trucks and otherwise over circuitous routes to the new battlefront, and other combat troops from the St. Mihiel area were now able to use the routes near the tip of the former salient made available by our recent success.

In the area behind our Meuse-Argonne battle-front, restricted as it was by the curve in the German line from Verdun to the south, there were but three standard gauge railroads available for the movement of troops and their supplies. One ran east and west between St. Menehould and Verdun, another north from Bar-le-Duc to Clermont-en-Argonne, and the third, northeast from Bar-le-Duc via Commercy and St. Mihiel to Souilly and Verdun.

Great Traffic Program

The roads converged toward the front, leaving only three leading into No-Man's-Land, one through Esnes, another through Avocourt and a third through Varennes; one for each corps. None of them, even though in good repair, was more than adequate for the normal supply of the attacking divisions dependent upon it.

We realized that any excess of traffic would likely cause serious congestion, so that the greatest preparations were made to rebuild these roads by calling to that front all available engineer personnel and accumulating beforehand as much road material as possible.

On September 3 the French 2nd Army held the front from Watronville to the Argonne Forest with three army corps. In vacating the sector, the French had to move two corps headquarters with corps troops, 11 division and several army units, leaving the French 17th Corps behind to become a part of our army.

Our concentration required the entrance into the area of three corps headquarters with corps troops, 15 divisions and several thousand army troops. All movements were made under cover of darkness, by rail, autobus and marching. Approximately 220,000 men were moved out of the sector and 600,000 into it, making a grand total of 820,000 men handled.

As in the concentration prior to St. Mihiel, the route and length of each day's march for each unit had to be prescribed in order to prevent road congestion and insure the necessary daily delivery of supplies. It was a stupendous task and a delicate one to move such numbers of troops in addition to the large quantities of

TOWNSHIP SUES IN WASTE ROW

A mandatory injunction to compel Sebastian Weiss, of Ross Township, to bury a huge deposit of garbage and waste material on his property and to restrain from making further deposits was asked in Common Pleas Court in an action in equity by the Township of Ross. The deposit is 400 feet long, 40 feet wide and two feet deep, on the surface of the 25-acre tract owned by Weiss and his wife, Mary Weiss, according to the suit.

During 1929 and 1930 Weiss is said to have collected garbage and waste materials from West View Borough and deposited the collections on his property without conforming to the township ordinance requiring burial of such deposits. He stopped hauling garbage last fall, after a warning by the health officer, but resumed it last month, the suit averred. The deposit constitutes a nuisance and a serious menace to the health of persons in the vicinity, it was alleged.

2 Girls' Suicide Attempts Laid to Quarrel, Illness

Two young women who, police say, attempted suicide by swallowing poison were reported recovering in hospitals today.

Because her mother would not allow her to go out last night, police say, Mary Yarmer, 16, of 3955 Oakdale avenue, North Side, swallowed poison in the kitchen of her home. The girl was said to have quarreled with her mother and then walked to the kitchen, draining the contents of a two-ounce bottle of poison. She was taken to St. John's Hospital where her condition was regarded as fair.

Despondency over illness was ascribed as the motive for the alleged suicide attempt of Miss Mary Brant, 20, in the basement of the home of Attorney O. Hicks Friedman, at 5615 Hobart street, last night. Miss Brant, a domestic at the Friedman home, in a telephone conversation with an unidentified person a few minutes before, announced her intention of taking her life, it was reported. Physicians at St. Francis Hospital, where she was taken, declared the young woman would recover.

Death Under Freight Train Ends Man's Job Hunt

Clarence Parks' search for work was at an end today.

Parks, 27, of Cokeville, near Blairsville, the father of four small children, was riding to Pittsburgh on a freight train when he was knocked from the top of a freight car, hurled beneath its wheels and killed last night. Parks and a companion boarded the train of the Pennsylvania Railroad at Blairsville to search for a job in Pittsburgh.

As the train was passing beneath the Herr's Island Bridge Parks arose and was knocked down. His head struck the bridge and he was hurled under the freight car.

The victim, a steam shovel engineer, had been out of work for several months. His widowed mother lives in Blairsville.

$10,000 MORE TO BE ASKED IN FIGHTING BURNING MINE

WASTE OF FUNDS BY COMPANY DENIED

Work Stops to Await Action By Council; Crafton Charges Bring Answer

Denying extravagance in expenditure of public funds to fight a mine fire under the McShane property, near the Crafton Borough line, the City Department of Public Works announced today that an additional $10,000 would be requested of Council next Monday to continue the work.

Work of the John F. Casey Company, contractors on the job was ordered suspended last night, contingent upon receiving the additional money from Council next week as an emergency measure.

J. J. Croak, engineer of the Department of Public Works, said the original $10,000 appropriated was to start the work, and that both Crafton and the city officials knew more would be required.

BOROUGH TO PAY THIRD

The agreement between the city and the borough, according to records on file in the Department of Public Works, showed Crafton was to stand as its share of the cost, one-third of the $10,000, or $3,333.34. The job is one-third completed, according to Webster Hinnau, Crafton engineer.

When a message from the city was read to Crafton Council Tuesday night, asking for payment of its share of the cost thus far, no action was taken. The Council stood on the agreement already made that no money be paid until the fire is out or confined.

Hinnau condemned the method used by the Casey company, of using a steam shovel to dig a ditch 40 feet deep and 50 feet wide to cut off the flames. He recommended a clamshell bucket and a narrow ditch at much less cost, he said. Moving too much earth is useless, he declares.

EQUIPMENT CRITICIZED

Those close to the job charge that the Casey Company is using old equipment and that breakdowns are frequent. Breakdowns and repair expenses have added to the cost of the job, they declare. Crafton Council was told that a force of men larger than necessary was at work.

Croak said:

"To Hinnau's recommendation that a clamshell bucket and a narrow ditch at lower cost should be used, I want to say that the ditch was made wide enough to get the steam shovels in. Engineering experience in mine fires has been that the wider the ditch, the less chance the flames have of spreading over."

Next Sunday afternoon, Viola Mitchell, a Pittsburgh girl, will reach one of the high peaks of musical achievement when she plays as guest violinist with the London Symphony Orchestra in Royal Albert Hall, London.

Although not yet 20, Miss Mitchell has already won a place as a violin virtuosi. Her Sunday concert, at which she will play a Brahms concerto, will be followed the next day by a recital in Wigmore Hall, under the patronage of Countess Balfour, who has also arranged for her a series of private recitals in other parts of England and in Scotland.

Miss Mitchell is a daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Atlee D. Mitchell, of 1137 Wightman street. She began the study of the violin at the age of 6 as a pupil of Miss Margaret Horne, and at the age of 13, accompanied by Miss Horne, went to Europe to continue her studies.

In the season of 1928-1929 she played twice in Berlin and also in Leipzig, Dresden, Cologne and a number of other German cities. CITY SCANS FIRE IN HILL MINE

Steps toward extinguishing a mine fire, burning under Wylie avenue for many years, and endangering buildings, were being taken today by City Solicitor Charles A. Waldschmidt and Public Works Engineer Charles Reppert.

Both were instructed by Council's committee on hearings to determine whether an emergency exists. If they decide that it does, an emergency appropriation will be asked of Council.

Headed by J. H. East, of 2251 Wylie avenue, a delegation told the committee yesterday that fumes from the smouldering coal under their homes presented a constant menace. East said insurance policies had been canceled by companies on all properties in the neighborhood, and that values had depreciated.

Mrs. Florence Sloan, 817 Deely street, told the councilmen her home had caught fire four times in the last six months from the flames beneath her cellar. Twice, she said, she received insurance, but the company refused payment on the other occasions.

Engineer Reppert said the depth of the coal is approximately 50 feet.

Don't Expect Soap Alone to Give Dish Washing Results . . .

New water-softening cleanser is almost magic in action—with local hard water and ¼ usual amount of soap. ½ the time.

A NEW discovery—not a soap, but a water-softening cleanser—makes any soap more effective by changing hard water to soft. It enables you to cut dish washing time in half. And you need use only one-fourth the usual amount of soap.

Women now find that greasy film on dishes has been eliminated and greasy scum is no longer left in the dishpan—in spite of this city's hard water.

What It Is

It is a preparation called Climalene that you add to your washing water. Just a teaspoon or two.

Instantly, it takes all the harshness out of that water. Makes it soft as rain water.

At the same time, due to certain bland cleansing agents, it instantly DISSOLVES all dirt, stains and grime.

Use the soap or soap flakes you ordinarily do. Then see for yourself the amazing results. During 1930 women used over 33,000,000 packages of Climalene for washing, for cleaning and in the dishpan.

Laboratory Proved

To assure results to you, we buy fine things, lingerie and delicate fabrics, costly china. Then, by repeated washings, try to spoil or fade them.

Consider, please, what those things mean to you. Consider, too, that the minute you put this creation into water, all harshness is taken away. Your hands protected from roughness, made soft, smooth and white. Then try it.

Remember the name—Climalene. Your grocer has it in 10c and 25c packages. THE CLIMALENE CO., CANTON, O. 172-RA when this ugly condition is removed

EVEN the most unobservant people notice Bacterial-Mouth and the most forgetful always remember its presence. For there's nothing more offensive to the eye than unwholesome gums and teeth that are stained an ugly yellow, cloudy, marred by decay. This condition is due to germs that sweep into the mouth and defy the ordinary toothpaste. They attack teeth and gums. Kolynos kills these germs and so removes Bacterial-Mouth with remarkable result.

Use the Kolynos Dry-Brush Technique for 3 days—a half-inch of Kolynos on a dry brush, morning and night. Then look at your teeth—fully 3 shades whiter.

In 10 days the improvement will be so marked you will never again say that white teeth are a gift received only by a fortunate few.

Dentists have long advocated the Dry-Brush Technique as the one way to use a dental cream full strength and keep brush bristles stiff enough to clean every tooth surface and massage gums properly. Only Kolynos permits this approved technique.

This highly concentrated, double-strength dental cream is unique in action. When it enters the mouth it becomes a surging, antiseptic FOAM that makes wetting the toothbrush unnecessary. You can feel Kolynos work. It foams into and cleans out every pit, fissure and crevice.

Germs that cause Bacterial-Mouth and lead to stain, decay and gum diseases are quickly killed. They vanish and the entire mouth is purified. Kolynos kills 190 million germs in 15 seconds, 424 million in 60 seconds.

This amazing Kolynos FOAM removes food particles that ferment and cause decay . . . neutralizes acids . . . washes away tartar and the unsightly mucoid coating that clouds teeth.

Easily and quickly, it cleans and polishes teeth down to the naked white enamel—without injury. And for 3 hours after each brushing this cleansing, purifying process continues.

So long as you use the Kolynos Dry-Brush Technique, teeth will remain gleaming white and sound, gums will be firm and healthy. Buy a tube of Kolynos from any druggist.

COMMISSIONERS UNDECIDED AFTER VIEWING VOTE MACHINES

WEEK REMAINS TO ORDER FOR PRIMARY

McGovern Hits Code 'Joker' Permitting Only Board To See Dials at Polls

Three voting machines, for which bids are pending in the County Commissioners' office, were demonstrated by manufacturers' representatives in the Courthouse yesterday in the presence of the three commissioners, their office staff and about 25 other spectators.

Replying to a question after the meeting, Chairman Joseph G. Armstrong said he could not tell when the board would decide on the preferred machine and make an award. A contract must be awarded within a week if machines are to be delivered for the primary, company representatives said.

TYPES DEMONSTRATED

The Automatic Voting Machine Company, of Jamestown, N. Y., demonstrated a "leg" type machine at $966.31 and a "cabinet" type at $1,106.31.

The Poole Engineering Company, of Baltimore, makers of the American voting machine, demonstrated a "cabinet" type at $1,019. The latter company was awarded a contract recently, but it was voided by the State Supreme Court on a question concerning specifications.

M'GOVERN SEES "JOKER"

Before the demonstration, Commissioner C. C. McGovern called attention to what he termed a "joker" in the election code bill pending in Harrisburg that permits concealment of the dials of the voting machine from all except members of the election board officiating at a particular polling place. He said:

"The returns should be exposed, not only to the election officials, but also to newspaper representatives, candidates and the general public. This board of commissioners should take steps to see that there is no concealment of any part of the machine."

County Solicitor M. B. Lesher observed that the pending election code bill was sponsored by the Election Reform Association. Armstrong said:

"That may be so, but we are the real reformers. The board of commissioners should put its shoulder to the wheel and see that any objectionable clause is stricken out."

The American machine is equipped with a printing press that provides copies of a complete tally of the election results one minute after the last vote has been cast.

The Automatic machine is safeguarded from tampering by a master key held by the authorized custodian of the machine. McGovern suggested having provision made for two additional master keys, one for the Mayor and another for the chairman of the Board of County Commissioners. All three would have to be present to open the lock after the manner of a safety deposit box.

Demonstrators of both machines told Chairman Armstrong that the voter could cast his ballot in secrecy. However, experts from the County Election Bureau pointed out how an unscrupulous member of an election board could watch a voter marking his ballot on the Automatic machine.

COLDS
contaminate handkerchiefs

A handkerchief used during a cold carries infection back to nose and mouth each time it's used again

Avoid Self-infection!
Use Kleenex and destroy

THE importance of Kleenex to health during colds cannot be overestimated. That is the conclusion of latest scientific tests.

Scientists have proved that handkerchiefs used for colds are filled with millions of disease germs—as many as 240,000 when used only once. Think of carrying these dangerous germs in your pocket or handbag—of actually carrying them back to your face. No wonder ordinary colds often develop into more serious diseases! Now by using Kleenex only once and discarding, you avoid danger of self-infection. That is one reason doctors advise Kleenex.

Absolutely sanitary

Kleenex is a soft, super-absorbent tissue, handkerchief size. You buy it in Cellophane-sealed packages. It is as completely sanitary as it looks. So gentle and soothing that irritation is impossible. So inexpensive that you use a fresh tissue each time, then discard. Each tissue that touches your face is clean and fresh. Kleenex will materially reduce your laundry bill. The ideal handkercief for children.

Ask for Kleenex at any drug, dry goods or department store. In three sizes: 25 cents, 50 cents and $1.00. If you have not tried Kleenex, send for a free trial package to the Kleenex Company, Lake Michigan Bldg., Chicago, Ill.

Bacteriological tests show:

1. That handkerchiefs used by persons having colds may contain as many as 4,170,000 germs per handkerchief.

2. That organisms representative of those associated with colds, when impregnated upon linen and rinsed in boiling water and soap water, were not killed nor appreciably inhibited from growing.

These reports are based on tests performed in the laboratories of Dr. Bertram Fewer, Chicago bacteriologist.

TUCKS AND FOLDS PLAY MAJOR ROLES THIS SPRING

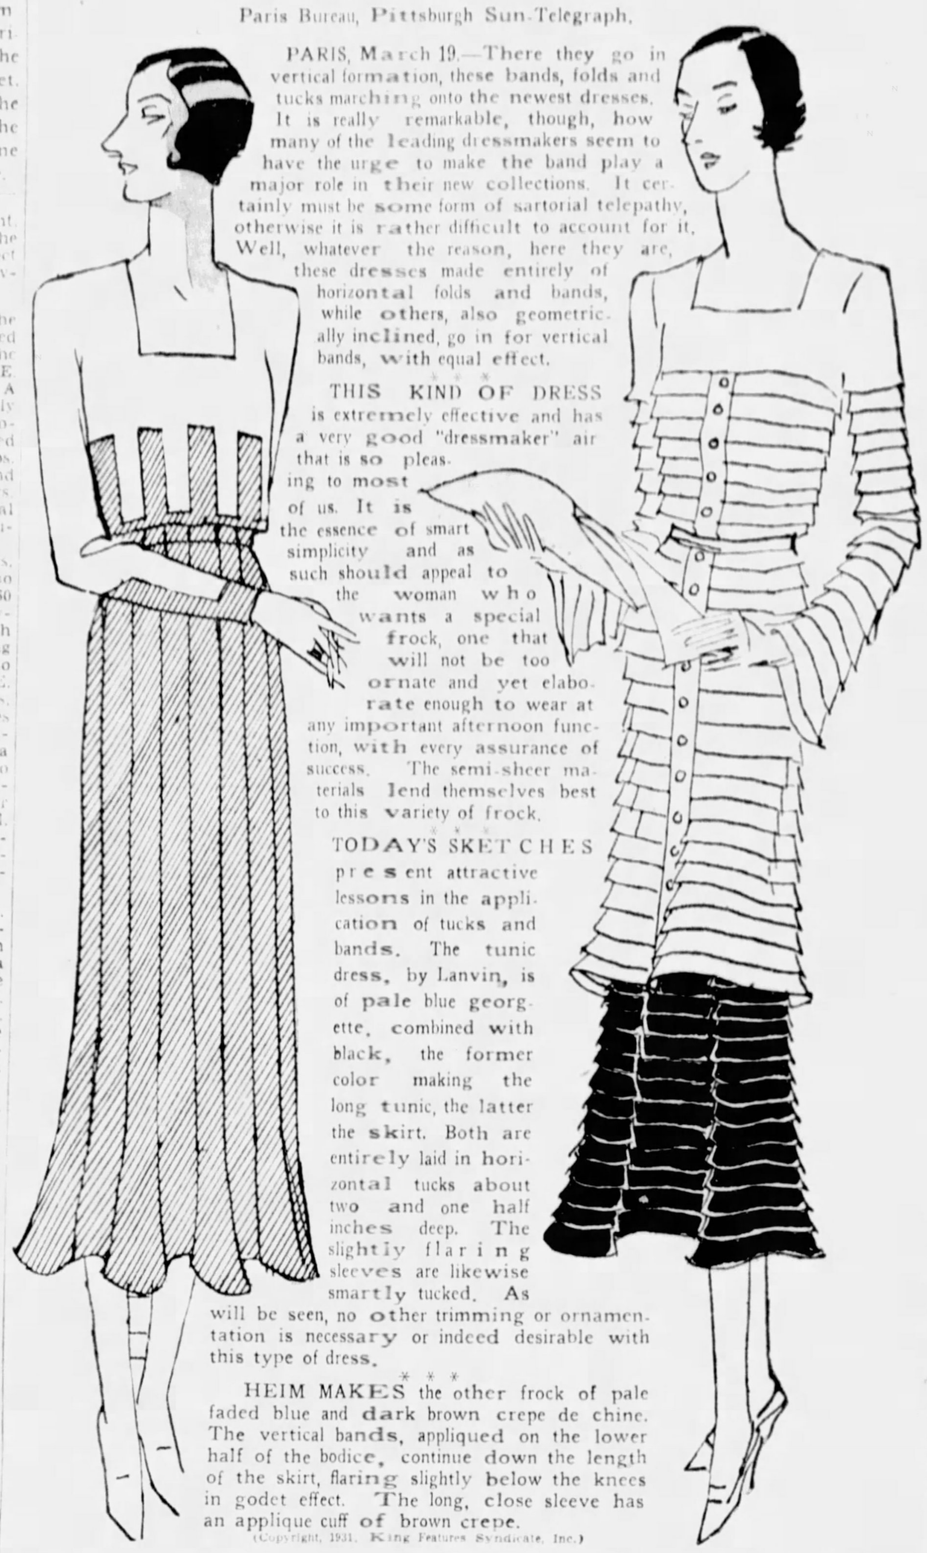
Paris Bureau, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.



PARIS, March 19.—There they go in vertical formation, these bands, folds and tucks marching onto the newest dresses. It is really remarkable, though, how many of the leading dressmakers seem to have the urge to make the band play a major role in their new collections. It certainly must be some form of sartorial telepathy, otherwise it is rather difficult to account for it. Well, whatever the reason, here they are, these dresses made entirely of horizontal folds and bands, while others, also geometrically inclined, go in for vertical bands, with equal effect.

THIS KIND OF DRESS is extremely effective and has a very good "dressmaker" air that is so pleasing to most of us. It is the essence of smart simplicity and as such should appeal to the woman who wants a special frock, one that will not be too ornate and yet elaborate enough to wear at any important afternoon function, with every assurance of success. The semi-sheer materials lend themselves best to this variety of frock.

TODAY'S SKETCHES present attractive lessons in the application of tucks and bands. The tunic dress, by Lanvin, is of pale blue georgette, combined with black, the former color making the long tunic, the latter the skirt. Both are entirely laid in horizontal tucks about two and one half inches deep. The slightly flaring sleeves are likewise smartly tucked. As will be seen, no other trimming or ornamentation is necessary or indeed desirable with this type of dress.

* * *

HEIM MAKES the other frock of pale faded blue and dark brown crepe de chine. The vertical bands, appliqued on the lower half of the bodice, continue down the length of the skirt, flaring slightly below the knees in godet effect. The long, close sleeve has an applique cuff of brown crepe.

Service That .... Pays Dividends

When you inspect a residence apartment, be thorough in your inquiry as to the service provided.

Consider that service is much more than a means toward a mode of living, supplying comforts and conveniences.

A substantial part of the rental you pay is, (or should be), an investment in the kind of service which renders dividends.

The payment of your rental check each month should acquire for you, in addition to residential premises:

Freedom from servant problems—
Relief from household worry and drudgery—
Economies in time as well as in money.

Schenley Apartments can stand with any high-type apartment group in the country when measured by the rule of service. This is because of superiority of equipment.

The regular service system employs 125 attendants—
This is supplemented by Hotel Schenley service facilities—
The Schenley Shoppes constitute another service adjunct—
The diversity of these makes the premises a community complete in itself.

Logically, such extensive service facilities cannot be equalled without duplication of the physical plant. Apartment service on the scale of high class hotel service, at apartment rentals, is an economical proposition worth investigating.

The rental office, on the premises, is open day or evening. Phone for appointment.

That it was carried out in the brief period available without arousing the suspicions of the enemy indicates the smoothness and precision with which it was calculated and accomplished.

The battle at St. Mihiel followed the plan so closely, however, that it was possible to withdraw troops exactly as ordered.

It seldom happens in war that plans can be so precisely carried out as in this instance. The details of the movements of troops connected with this concentration were worked out and their execution conducted under the able direction of Col. George C. Marshall, Jr., of the Operations Section of the General Staff, First Army.

A well-known British war correspondent, an ex-officer of the British Army, in writing of the concentration for the London Post, said:

"Few people in England know that this operation (the Argonne-Meuse offensive), was preceded by one of the most interesting and difficult staff operations of the war, the transfer within 14 days of the bulk of the 1st American Army from the Metz front to that of the Meuse-Argonne, and its replacement by the 2nd American Army. No less than 10 divisions began the Meuse-Argonne attack September 26, including the 4th, 26th, 28th, 33rd, 37th, 77th, 79th, 80th and 91st, while there stood in reserve, all eventually to be thrown into the fight, the 1st, 2nd, 3rd, 5th, 29th, 32nd, 82nd and 92nd divisions. A comparison of these divisional units with those which fought at St. Mihiel shows that 10 divisions were withdrawn from the Metz front and aligned for the new operation. It was a fine piece of staff work, and no other staff could have done it better."

Troops Instructed

Specific instructions were sent to all troops calling attention to defects noticed during the St. Mihiel battle, such as ineffective liaison between units, passage through woods, regulation of barrages and the use of accompanying guns.

As we have seen, some of our most experienced divisions, like the 1st, 2nd, 26th and 42nd, were used at St. Mihiel. This prevented their transfer to the Meuse-Argonne in time to open the fight, and compelled the employment of some divisions which had not entirely completed their period of training.

Four of the nine divisions that were to lead the assault were without their own artillery and had brigades of that arm assigned to them with which they had never previously been in contact.

It was realized that difficulties were likely to develop on the battlefield in handling these organizations in battle for the first time.

Therefore, instructions for the opening phases were made to cover as far as possible the details of maneuver ordinarily taught beforehand through combat exercises.

As Verdun was soon to become a part of my command I went to see the town September 21, and make a casual inspection of the citadel. The commanding officer showed me the various chambers, including those occupied by the local civil authorities during the period of the German drive to wrest the stronghold from the French, and finally we reached the Officers' Club.

As we entered my eye fell upon Petain's famous declaration, "On ne passe pas," in bold letters on the wall opposite me. It would be difficult to describe my feelings, and as I stopped in my tracks the party, realizing the reason, with one accord remained silent for some minutes.

Pays Petain Tribute

Several years later, at the dedication of the Ossuary near Douaumont, it was my privilege to speak, and I addressed myself as follows to the distinguished commander who uttered the above inspiring phrase:

"The poignant horror of the tragedy enacted here has been brought home to me anew, and my triumphant sense of victory has been entirely overwhelmed by my sympathy for the men who fell, the victims of the sacrifice. Their patience and courage, their unalterable will to follow to the end the long and dolorous road of martyrdom which they were treading, have been celebrated in words more appropriate than any I could utter. But the grief of the man who commanded them has been too often forgotten by all who have commented on these battles.

"I have often felt, when you and I were together, that I could read your thoughts and follow your mind as it reviewed the days and weeks of your struggles on this soil, when your country's fate hung in the balance. Only those who know the kindness of your heart can appreciate the weight of sorrow which it carried. The fall of each one of your soldiers was a stab in the heart of his general, and the impassive expression under which you hide your feelings masked constant and unremitting grief.

"As an old friend and comrade in arms, I feel my thoughts dwelling on those who did not return, and like you, I think of them with infinite sympathy."

My diary records:

"Souilly, Wednesday, September 25, 1918. Assumed command of Meuse-Argonne sector the 22d. Gen. Gouraud, commanding the French 4th Army, called to discuss joint operation.

"Gen. Deletoille, director of the Zone des Etapes, reported Monday and was given charge of relations with civil authorities in our area. Have spent the past three days working with staff on final details of preparation.

"Today visited headquarters of all front line divisions. Satisfied that they appreciate and understand their missions."

Co-operate With French

The 1st, 5th and 3rd Corps headquarters, located at Rarecourt, Ville-sur-Cousances and Rampont respectively, worked in co-operation with the corresponding units of the French 2nd Army, which under Gen. Hirschauer's able and friendly direction did everything possible to expedite preparations.

Gen. Hirschauer was of the greatest assistance in helping to place installations and in assigning units that were moved into the sector during the two weeks preceding the battle. The command passed to the 1st Army September 22, and at that time the last of the French troops and two Italian divisions serving with them were withdrawn, except for a thin line of detachments in the front trenches, which were maintained until the night of the 25th.

On the front of the American Army the tactical missions varied for the different sectors. It was not intended to attempt to further advance on the Moselle-Watronville front, but to hold that portion of our line for the time being and utilize all available divisions for the extension of the front west of the Meuse.

On that part of our line from Watronville northwest to the Meuse it was planned to keep the enemy busy by demonstrations while the attack between the Meuse and the Argonne was developing.

Of the 18 enemy divisions on our front from the Moselle west, with 12 in reserve, five were in line between the Meuse and the Argonne. Judging from the number in the vicinity of Metz, it seemed probable that the German commander expected a renewal of the offensive in the St. Mihiel sector.

Pennsylvanians in Line

At the beginning of this battle most of the light and heavy guns, including corps and army artillery material and supply trains, as at St. Mihiel, were provided by the French, some by the British, and practically none from home.

We had 189 light tanks, all of French manufacture, 25 per cent of which were handled by French personnel, but no heavy tanks could be obtained. In aviation we had 821 planes, more than 600 of which were flown by American aviators.

The order of battle of the 1st Army from the Moselle river to the Meuse river for September 25, from east to west, was as follows: The 4th Corps (Dickman) with the French 69th Division and our 90th, 78th, 89th and 42d divisions in line and the 5th in reserve; French 2nd Colonial Corps with the French 39th and 2d divisions and our 26th Division in line; French 17th Corps with the French 15th, 10th and 18th divisions in line and the French 26th Division in reserve.

In the order of battle on the Meuse-Argonne front, from east to west, the 3rd Corps (Bullard) was on the right, with the 33d Division (Bell) nearest the Meuse to cover the river and protect the flank of the army, the 80th Division (Cronkhite) in the center, and the 4th Division (Hines) on the left, with the 3d Division (Buck) in reserve.

The 5th Corps (Cameron) consisted of the 79th Division (Kuhn) facing Montfaucon and the 37th (Farnsworth) and the 91st (Johnston) in that order, while the 32d Division (Haan) was in reserve. The 1st Corps (Liggett) was on the left of the army with the 35th Division (Traub) on its right, the 28th Division (Muir) next, astride the Aire River, and the 77th Division (Alexander) facing the Argonne, with the 5th Cavalry Division (French) and the 92d Division (Colored) (Ballou) in reserve, except one regiment which was attached to the French 4th Army. The 1st Division (Summerall), the 29th (Morton) and the 82d (Duncan) formed the army reserve.

Gen. Muir

Simultaneous Attacks

In accordance with the principal mission, which remained the same throughout this great offensive, the main attack by the 1st Army to be launched west of the Meuse river, its right to be covered by the river and by the operations of the French 17th Corps on the east of the river, that corps being a part of our army.

Our left was to be supported by a simultaneous attack by the French 4th Army. Our attack, to include the Argonne Forest, was to be driven with all possible strength in the general direction of Mezieres.

The first operation of our Army was to have for its objective the Hindenburg position on the front Brieulles-sur-Meuse—Romagne-sous-Montfaucon—Grandpre, with a following development in the direction of Buzancy-Mezieres in order to force the enemy beyond the Meuse and outflank his position on the Vouziers-Rethel line from the east.

In conjunction with our advance, which would outflank the enemy's position south of the Aisne, the French 4th Army, by attacking successively the positions between the Aisne and the Suippes rivers, would be able to occupy the line Vouziers-Rethel. After that it would operate in the direction of the plateau east of the Rethel-Signy-l'Abbaye road.

A liaison detachment under the French 4th Army was designated to operate along the western edge of the Argonne Forest as a connecting link between the French and American armies.

Long Advances Planned

In detail, it was actually planned by the 1st Army to make:

(a) An advance of 10 miles to force the enemy to evacuate the Argonne Forest and insure our junction with the French 4th Army at Grandpre.

(b) Then a further advance of 10 miles to the line Stenay-Le Chesne to outflank the enemy's position along the Aisne River in front of the French 4th Army and clear the way for our advance on Mezieres or Sedan.

(c) An operation to clear the heights east of the Meuse River, either by an attack in an easterly direction or by an attack northward along the east bank of the Meuse River between Beaumont and Sivry-sur-Meuse, to clear the crest south of Bois de la Grande Montague, or by a combination of these two attacks.

The 3rd Corps was directed to penetrate the enemy's position, turn Montfaucon, protect the right flank of the attack and organize the line of the Meuse for defense. Its corps and divisional artillery, while supporting the advance, was to assist in neutralizing the enemy's fire from the heights east of the Meuse.

The 5th Corps mission was to reduce the Bois de Montfaucon and the Bois de Cheppy by outflanking them from the east and west, and to cut off the enemy artillery fire on the 3nd and 1st corps. Its corps and divisional artillery was directed to assist in neutralizing hostile observation from Montfaucon.

The 1st Corps was to reduce the Argonne Forest by flanking it from the east, and to assist in suppressing artillery fire from the eastern edge of the forest. Each corps was directed to operate in conjunction with the others in the advance to the army objective: Consenvoye—Brieulles—Romagne—Exermont—Apremont—Binarville.

Seek Vital Points

Our purpose was to effect a tactical surprise if possible, overcome the enemy's first and second positions in the area of Montfaucon and capture the commanding heights (Cote Dame Marie) of his third position before the enemy could bring up strong reinforcements. It was an ambitious plan and one that would require a rapid advance of 10 miles through a densely fortified zone. From an estimate of the enemy's reserves and their location it was realized that we must capture Montfaucon and seize Cote Dame Marie by the end of the second day.

It was thought reasonable to count on the vigor and the aggressive spirit of our troops to make up in a measure for their inexperience, but at the same time the fact was not overlooked that lack of technical skill might considerably reduce the chances of complete success against well organized resistance of experienced defenders.

Gen. Petain had already given it as his opinion that we should not be able to get farther than Montfaucon before winter.

Foreseeing clearly the difficulty under the existing conditions of reaching in one stride an objective 10 miles away, alternative plans were made to continue with more deliberation but with every determination to win in the contest which, if not successful in the first rush, was certain to become extremely severe.

The afternoon of the day before the attack I visited the headquarters of corps and divisions to give a word of encouragement here and there to the leaders upon whom our success on the following days would depend. They were all alert and confident and I returned feeling all would go well.

Tomorrow: Great Meuse-Argonne offensive begins; Americans gain eight miles in four days.

You Can't Judge All Girls By Just a Few

Is Miss 1931 just a Grabby Gert?

Out to dig all she can out of the Boy Friend and, ready to ditch him the minute she glimpses a gal with a bigger roll?

She is, says Homer. And then he adds some more helpful hints for Jack, who fell in love with his pal's best girl, and asked whether he should stick by the pal or the girl.

"Huh! That's easy," snorts Homer. "Keep your friend! There isn't a modern girl who's worth any man's time."

Says Girls Want Money

Here we are!

"My dear Miss Martin:

"I read your column every day, and now I want to put a few remarks for the benefit of Jackie, who is all up in the air because he thinks he has fallen in love with his best buddy's sweetie.

"Here goes, young man!

"It's too bad that the two of you seem to love the same girl. But take my advice. Never break up a friendship with another fellow because of any girl . . . because there is no girl of this younger generation who is worth that much.

"In fact, there isn't one of them who is worth having any man take her seriously. If you do break with your friend, you'll be mighty sorry; you let the girl make a sap out of you.

"All these present-day young girls know is to ask 'How much have you?' And how much can I get?' They're all out for the fellow with the dough . . . and ready to ditch him the minute they see someone with more dough coming their way.

"Our mothers were different. They could appreciate a fellow for what he was. So could our grandmothers. But the girls of this present age are all out for a good time, fancy clothes and a soft life. And if a fellow can't give it to them, it's curtains for him.

Has Wrong Opinion

"I've been around a lot, and had a lot of experience, and I know what I'm talking about.

"So watch your step. And hang on to that pal of yours. Don't let any of these twentieth century gold diggers break up your friendship.

"HOMER."

So they're all out for gold-digging and glad rags, are they? Well, I'll gamble you yourself are one of the lads who can't see 'em unless they do wear the latest permanents in trick clothes.

And you may have had a lot of experience, but where?

As a matter of fact, there are thousands of energetic, gritty and courageous youngsters who are taking chances every day, on hard work and poverty with the men they love. I know, because I meet them every day. And get letters from them.

Not long ago, Philip Allen wrote to this department asking whether or not he dared ask the lady of his heart to share his lot on $35 a week. And scores answered him. Scores of straight-thinking, straight-hitting kids who proclaimed themselves glad to take a chance on that small income with men they loved. Scores of young wives and some not so young, telling proudly of how they'd found happiness sometimes on even less.

The world's full of girls like that, Homer. But the chances are you won't find them dining in chiffon and diamonds . . . or dancing the night away at the Purple Pup or the Cafe de Jazz. They're quiet, hard-working kids you're probably too snooty to even notice.

Shows Selfishness

As a matter of fact, you've no case against the girls. You're just alibiing yourself. Knocking the present is a great game for people who want to dodge the difficulties and tiresome chores of meeting life As Is, and that's why you're doing it. The Past has no monopoly on Angelic Qualities any more than the present has. Humans were just as cussed in 1881 and 1901 as they are in 1931. And they did just as much bellyaching about the Good Old Days when Everything was Rosy.

It may give you a Big Bang to picture Gramma as a Sweet Li'l Gal with no thought for such a crassly material thing as money. But as a matter of fact she was deeply interested in it. She had to be. She had to think of feeding her children. And of keeping a roof over their heads. And she was wholly dependent on her man. She couldn't afford to take a chance and marry one who'd fail to deliver the goods. But today, when women have their own pay checks, thousands of spunky, efficient girls are marrying gents with slim pocketbooks . . . and keeping right on with the old job so they can.

I suspect your trouble is selfishness. You've done a lot of thinking about what the girls should do for you and mighty little about what you should do for them. Quit grabbing and try giving, and love won't cheat . . . if you use judgment.

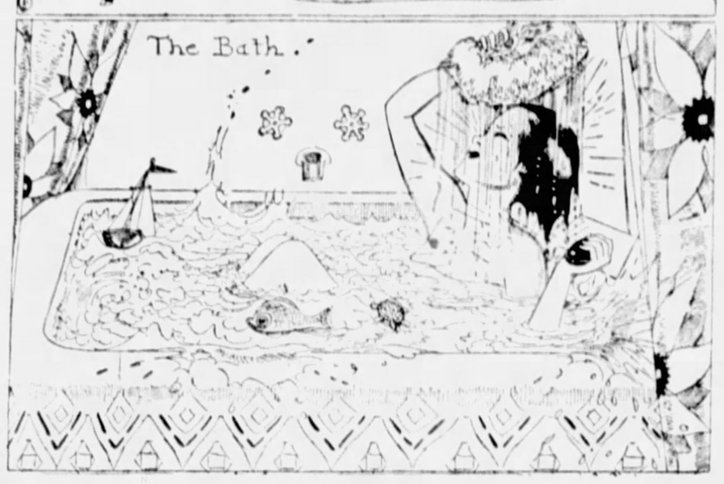
SUMMER and WINTER

Drawn by Nell Brinkley



This is leaving out you lucky California "habitants," and you dwellers in the Floridian air of strained honey. You, the both of you, have REAL sun, REAL sea almost the entire year round. You always have the sun to worship—but I notice with wonderment that the denizen of a land of perpetual sun and flowers believes he must have a SEASON FOR THE SEA—and when it gets cooler than lukewarm tea-kettle water he nips out of it 'til the season is on again!

Here where I am, the Atlantic and the sky are grey a goodish bit of the winter-time. So we have to pretend, and take the next best thing to sun and "the bath." We sit under the blaze of a sun-lamp, not far from the radiator, in our briefies, and BASK "The sun—a bathing suit—warmth—and a book." Second-best, but better than nothing at all. And I forgot to add to the picture—a sense of humor.

For "the big bath," with waves, and foam, and horizon, and sea-weed, and fishes and things, we have only the humble tub! We can make waves, and foam, we can have celluloid fishes, and even a blue sail-boat—three inches long—bobbing about under our chin. We can squeeze water, with sea-salt in it—yo-ho!—on our heads. And add—the sense, that same old sense, of humor! Second best—but better than no pretense at all.

Some of us take life like that—and are mighty happy. It is good to get that KICK, that THRILL, out of life that makes us a gift of eternal youth, even if we have to hunt it out and make it. Second-best is no goal to put before you; you must not call it ultimate—the end. Only a star is fit to hitch your wagon to. But while you're riding along behind the star, with your wheels still deep in the earthly dust, you can find quite a collection of make-believes to perk up your passing hours.

Until you can find the sun—bask in a sun-lamp.

How to Keep Well

By DR. COPELAND

All Back Pains Are Not Traceable to Kidneys.

Dr. Copeland

Have you ever had a pain in the back and been told by a solicitous friend that you "must" have kidney trouble? This friend means no harm, of course, but in his effort to help you he is likely to recommend some worthless patent medicine.

Diseases of the kidney are common and often difficult to recognize. However, in the past two decades great advances have been made in our knowledge of these diseases. No longer do we look with horror upon them. We need not be terrified if told we are facing Bright's disease.

Not so long ago, all diseases of the kidney were spoken of as "Bright's disease." It was the general belief that no cure was to be had for the ailment.

But now the medical profession can adequately handle kidney disease. Great advances in certain laboratory tests enable the doctor to determine whether the kidneys are working as they should. It can be decided whether they are infected or diseased and just what the disease really is.

With the advances made in the use of the X-ray, the kidneys can be definitely outlined. Tumors of the kidneys and other abnormalities now can be seen and studied.

No greater advances have been made in any other branch of surgery than in that dealing with the kidney. Where surgery is necessary, it is now applied with the minimum of risk to the patient. If the kidney requires certain changes because of some mechanical obstruction, these are undertaken by the surgeon. It is really remarkable what surgery is doing in these modern days.

Not by any means are pains in the back always due to kidney disease. Such pains, however, must be investigated. But, I beg of you, do not be influenced by advertisements dealing with "kidney remedies." If you suspect you have kidney disease, you should consult your physician. He will prescribe for you if you really have trouble, and advise you.

If there is a suspicion of kidney trouble, I warn you against home remedies or patent medicines.

Madge Fears Upset of Her Plans Through Noel's Jealousy.

"Yes, dear," I said, as Mary hesitated. "What about Noel?"

"I'm afraid he's going to be foolish about that Mr. Cameron," she said. "I don't know whether you noticed at dinner."

"Yes, I did notice," I returned emphatically, for I had seen with uneasiness that the young talkie star was doing his best to monopolize Mary's attention. In the old wives' parlance he "didn't take his eyes from her," and when he was not talking to her he was listening to her replies as if his future career hung upon her words.

"I really tried hard to talk to Noel, too," Mary said, "but Mr. Cameron was too clever for me. I couldn't dodge talking to him without being actually rude to him and I thought you wouldn't want me to be that, because he is Mr. Veritzen's friend."

"You are right, dear," I told her. "I haven't decided yet just what Noel's father is planning—something unpleasant, I am afraid—but if I have any chance to circumvent him it will depend a great deal upon his being kept in good humor. I've sacrificed something to the cause," I smiled, as I touched Dicky's three rosebuds at my girdle and the showy cluster of Philip Veritzen's white orchids at my shoulder "and I don't know what other unpleasantness may be in store for me. But I don't mind if only things turn out all right. We are all in a conspiracy to humor Mr. Veritzen until after this party, and one of the surest ways of angering him would be to treat his friend cavalierly. I don't mind telling you, dearest, that you managed things beautifully during dinner. You didn't defer to the spoiled young man as most girls would have done, but you kept him mightily interested. You'll have less trouble at the dance, because we have three more young men than there are young girls, and the stag line, even though on so miniature a scale, ought to keep any young man from having a monopoly of any girl's time, which is as it should be at dances. Run along now, dear, and enjoy your evening to the utmost. I'll manage a word with Noel before he goes down to the dancing floor. That is what you want, isn't it?"

I smiled mischievously at her, and she flushed.

"Consider yourself hugged and kissed," she said. "I don't dare touch you for fear of rumpling you. You're such a wonderful picture, Auntie Madge, with your hair and your eyes and your coloring, in that green gown. And those jade things Uncle Dicky gave you, and the white orchids with the touch of green just makes it perfect. And you don't look any older than we do. I don't wonder Mr. Veritzen is crazy—"

She broke off sharply, biting her lips.

"Please forgive me," she said, humbly. "Honestly that just slipped out. I didn't mean it."

"See that you never say anything like it again," I said sternly, then relented as I saw her sensitive face shadow.

"I know you didn't mean it, sweetheart," I said softly, "so we won't think of it again. And I do thank you for all the pretty things you've said of me, even if they are too extravagant to be true. Good hunting!"

I turned away from her quickly, fighting the resentment at her slip which I had been too just to let her see for more than an instant. In simple justice I had to admit that Phillip Veritzen's demeanor to me was such as to call forth a comment like Mary's—thought, if not spoken. It was a problem which I meant to solve definitely before very long, but as I had just told Mary, I wanted to avoid all friction with my temperamental employer until after the party. It would not be long now, only a few more hours, and so far he had been in the best of humors. The appreciation of his magnificent gestures of flowers and theater tickets, the fact that I had worn his orchids, the marked attention which Colin Cameron was giving—and Mary permitting—I guessed that all these things were factors in the glow of self-satisfaction, which patently wrapped his soul.

Noel must not be permitted to spoil things. I made my way to the living room, to which some of the men had come back from the Underwood apartment, and spoke unobtrusively to Noel.

"Will you help me a minute, Noel?" I asked carelessly. "I need a handy young man in the kitchen."

"Don't you need two?" Jerry asked audaciously. But I shook my head, laughingly, and Noel followed me docilely into the kitchen, where I shut the door before speaking.

"I know what you want," Noel began hoarsely, and I saw that his fingers were clenched in his palms. "You think I'm going to break my promise to you, and I'm afraid I am. I wouldn't mind if that man were like the other chaps here tonight. But he—I've heard about him—he's almost as great a cad as Jack Leslie. My father ought to be shot for bringing him here to your party."

Tomorrow's Horoscope

Friday, March 20

Although this is heralded as a particularly lively and interesting day, according to the prevailing planetary directions, yet there are auguries of uncertainty and complications. There is prospect of an upheaval or disintegrating experience of sudden nature, possibly attended by definite financial hazards. Change, rearrangements and new contracts are probable, but all call for precaution and sagacity, lest loss and danger accrue. Personal affairs are safer.

Those whose birthday it is may prepare for a very lively year, with possible change or travel, but with suddenly upheaved conditions that may entail financial hazards. Shun speculative and untried ventures, and handle all new matters with precaution and discretion. Personal relations and activities are favored. A child born on this day may be clever, versatile and alert but disposed to be changeable, restless, utopian and fond of taking large and unprofitable chances. Its personal affiliations may bring pleasant and prosperous adventures.

By HELEN FOLLETT

Following along after the frenzy for nail polish of a silver glitter come eye shadows that give the lids a frosted, silvered surface. All right maybe for the speedy gals, but the average femme won't have any use for them, for the reason that make-up of the extreme order makes a woman conspicuous and she doesn't want to feel that she is a public spectacle.

Corns can be removed easily enough, but the old trick callous piles up unless the pressure of the shoe is removed. Soft corns between the toes can be cured by the wearing of cotton pads that keep the surface dry. Bunions are caused by shoes too narrow that send the big toe pointing inward, instead of straight ahead as nature intended.

Mere shampooing will not dislodge stubborn, oily dandruff. The dead skin cells must be loosened by the applications of oils. Any oil will serve—mineral, olive or sweet oil—and it will do its work most effectively if it is applied hot and frictioned in for 10 minutes. There should be a lapse of 12 hours between the oiling and the soapy scrubbing.

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Kind Notes of Appreciation

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. Do sympathy or condolence letters and cards require an answer? If so, how soon after they are received?

2. When introducing a minister, should I say "The Rev. Mr. Rowan," or "Our pastor, Mr. Rowan"?

1. Yes, letters of sympathy, as well as flowers, should be acknowledged. The letters of acknowledgement need not be written promptly . . . this would not be looked for by one's friends . . . but they should be written. Too, they need not be long, just a sentence or two . . . perhaps something like this:

Dear Mary:

Thank you so much, and so deeply for your kind words of sympathy and understanding. We all appreciated your beautiful words. Very sincerely yours.

2. The latter form is a gracious and correct one.

The Bride-to-Be's Shower

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Should the future in-laws of the bride-to-be be asked to every shower in her honor?

Should close friends be asked to more than one shower? Or is it proper to ask your entire list to every shower? M. F.

In making your list for each shower, it is appropriate to include the names of those who would naturally be included in that special group. That is, when the families are invited, then in the in-laws would be included. When your bridge club is to be asked, then limit to the members, or friends of the members. And so forth.

To be a HEALTHY WOMAN
Correct Constipation!

WHAT should women do to keep their bowels moving freely? A doctor should know the answer. That is why pure Syrup Pepsin is so good for women. It just suits their delicate organism. It is the prescription of an old family doctor who has treated thousands of women patients, and who made a special study of bowel troubles.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is made from fresh laxative herbs, pure pepsin and other harmless ingredients. It doesn't sicken or weaken you. But its action is thorough. It carries off the sour bile and poisonous waste. It does everything you want it to do. It is fine for children, too. They love its taste. Let them have it every time their tongues are coated or their skin is sallow. Give some to keep little bowels open during colds.

When you've a sick headache, can't eat, are bilious or sluggish; and at the times when you are most apt to be constipated, take a little of this famous prescription (all druggists keep it ready in big bottles) and you'll know why Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is the favorite laxative of over a million women!

FOOTBALL FOR ALL WHO WISH TO PLAY

ACCORDING TO PLANS outlined by Harvey Harman, Penn's new gridiron coach, Quaker students who desire to play football will not be required to remain inactive during the season just because they are not good enough pigskin performers to break into the varsity games. The former Pitt tackle announces that his policy will include something on the order of the Notre Dame system, which calls for football for everybody wishing to play. He says he will favor an open door to the gridiron, making it possible for all desiring to play to do so.

Harvey Harman

Schedules will be arranged after the fashion in the West, and B teams and others, such as 150-pounders will be given their own games. Harman says he can't see any sense in having 60 or more men out for the varsity team and only 11 playing. He remarks that the players on the bench feel it, and that the coach does also, pointing out that some members go through an entire season warming the bench, never once getting into a game.

THE PANTHER LINEMAN of a decade ago makes it known officially that there will be no spring practice for the Penn gridders. Neither will there be any preliminary practice at Cape May in the late summer, as has been the custom. Fundamentals will be taught as soon as the men round into condition in the fall. A few good plays, well learned, will replace a lot of complicated maneuvers that were only half learned.

The lateral pass will be one of the basic features of Penn's attack, aligned with the system taught by Pop Warner. "Of course, I intend to use the system I know best, the Warner type," Harvey says, "but I mean to adapt the system of play to the players available. I am going to mold my plans around the material I have on hand and pray for results." Paul Scull, former all-America fullback at Penn, probably will be Harman's first lieutenant, as he was at Sewanee last year. Si Pauxtis also will continue as a member of the coaching staff.

THIRTY-FOUR YEARS AGO last Tuesday, a woman for the first time took a hand in directing a ring fight in this country. Sitting in a box in the wooden arena at Carson City while her husband was battling with Jim Corbett for the world heavyweight championship, Mrs. Bob Fitzsimmons (the former Rose Julian, acrobat) shouted words of counsel and encouragement, including such tender wifely sentiment as "Hit 'im in the slats, Bob!"

Since then, several women, notably Ma Stribling, have figured prominently in directing fistic affairs. It is no secret that the real manager of Len Harvey, British middleweight champion, who meets Ben Jeby in New York tomorrow night, is his wife, and now it develops that still another widely-known fighter is to have a fair pilot.

RAY ALVIS has been ousted as manager of King Levinsky, Chicago heavyweight, and in future Levinsky's affairs will be handled by Lena Levy, the fighter's sister. She has notified promoters that they must negotiate with her for the King's services hereafter. The Levys or Levinskys tied a can to Alvis on account of a financial miscue in connection with the recent Tuffy Griffiths fight. In making the match, Alvis agreed with the promoters to take 60 per cent of the receipts and pay Griffiths a guarantee of $25,000 out of that sum. The gate amounted to $46,000, and the 60 per cent to $27,600, with the result that after Griffiths had been given $25,000, all that remained for Levinsky and his manager was $2,600. That was Alvis' finish.

Jack Sherlock

BALL PLAYERS OF established major league caliber can get away with the holdout stuff because their services are needed, but when a lesser light tries the same game he is taking a long chance that may only bring him to grief. One of the latter kind has just talked himself out of the majors.

Jack Sherlock, of the Phillies, once a Pirate experiment, decided to follow the example of Chuck Klein and be a holdout. So he sent back his contract unsigned and demanded a larger salary. He has just received his answer from the Phillies—they sold him to the Reds and the latter sold him to the Hollywood club of the Pacific Coast League in part payment for Mickey Heath. That means less pay than the Phils offered him.

MANY ANOTHER PLAYER not long up from the minors has experienced a similar rude jolt after overestimating his importance on a big league club and going in for holdout publicity. Not all of them appreciate their jobs as did a former Pirate trainer.

He was a Negro named Ed Laforce and he was rated one of the best trainers in the game, but success never turned his head. "Are you holding out, too?" Laforce was asked as he turned up at headquarters one spring when found that several of the Pirates were unsigned. "Not on your life," he replied. "I'm holdin' on."

THE MAN WHO was responsible for the nickname borne by the Brooklyn ball club 30 years ago when the present Robins were known as the Superbas, died Tuesday in St. Petersburg, Fla. He was Edward Hanlon, 85, world famous acrobat at one time and last of the Six Hanlons, who reached their crest in two extravaganzas called "Hanlon's Fantasma" and "Hanlon's Superba," combination of comedy, thrills and pantomime that are well remembered by theatergoers of those days in this district. When baseball's Ned Hanlon transferred Willie Keeler, Hugh Jennings, Joe Kelley, Bill Dahlen, Dan McGann, Jay Hughes and Jimmy McJames from the Baltimore Orioles to Brooklyn in 1899 and won two straight pennants, the club of exceptional stars was promptly dubbed "Hanlon's Superbas," and among the older fan guard in Brooklyn the name sticks even to this day.

IN VIEW OF the decisive manner in which Scott High School, of North Braddock, defeated Duquesne High at the Stadium last night in the final game for the basketball championship of the W. P. I. A. L., there is no doubt that the title is resting in the right hands. There is no getting around a score of 36 to 11.

That the North Braddock lads were able to bowl over opposition so strong as Dunbar, Scottdale and the defending champion, New Kensington, and then have enough left to defeat Duquesne by such a one-sided count, makes it clear that they were the class of the tournament and won on their merits. The W. P. I. A. L. championship has never been won more convincingly.

IN ASSEMBLING A mythical greatest tennis player by combining the best points of the various stars of the nets, Bill Tilden awards the smashing honors to Jean Borotra, French Davis Cup racueter, who is now competing in the United States indoor championship tournament in New York.

"I would choose the overhead of Borotra," Tilden said. "It would be a difficult thing to pass over Henri Cochet's marvelous point winner, or the devastating hurricanes of George Lott, John Doeg, Frank Shields and Wilmer Allison, but I believe that from all points in the court Borotra is today the greatest smasher in the world.

Jean Borotra

"JEAN'S ONLY EQUALS in the past were Maurice McLoughlin and Gerald Patterson. Borotra wins more points outright off difficult lobs than does Cochet, and for that reason I pick Jean's smash. I would choose the volley of Vincent Richards. I do this though I consider Borotra, Cochet, and, at his best, Bill Johnston, his superior as high volleyers. I recognize in Lott, Shields and Sidney Wood a trio of phenomenal volleyers, but for consistent play of all volleys from the ankles to the shoulders there is not and never has been any one as aggressive yet reliable as Richards. I would choose the match as aggressive yet reliable as Richards. I would choose the match of Borotra, Cochet or Frank Hunter—anyone of them."

SAN FRANCISCO, March 19.—The Pirates and Tigers will entertain this afternoon at the new home of the San Francisco Seals. The grand ball park was opened about a week ago, but to the Buccos and Bengals will fall the honor of staging the initial major league fracas.

The new orchard is situated not far from old Recreation Park, which was a reminder of the Baker bandbox in Philadelphia. The latest thing in diamond layouts has deep fields which will engender good baseball and the park from the viewpoint of the patron is said to be ideal. In keeping with their confidence in the bright weather, the owners of the local team had the stands erected sans roofs.

Manager Ens will call upon Glenn Spencer and Claude Willoughby to face the Tigers in the exhibition tilt. The two right-handers are in fine form, and both should make the journey rough for Buck Harris' batters. Frank Doljak, former Wheeling Middle Atlantic League star, will play for the Tigers.

The Pirates tasted their first defeat yesterday as they battled the Oakland club in Oakland. The second contest of the two-game set found the big leaguers in a batting slump, and, as a result of a miscue, they were forced to bow in a 2-to-1 fight.

Rains of the morning made the ground wet, but the Oakland officials decided to go through with the contest. In the eighth inning, the home team scored both of their runs, it cashing in on a break furnished by Ben Sankey, who slipped in fielding a roller.

The score was 1 to 0 in favor of the Pirates with one out in the eighth. Catcher Pool then hit a grounder to Ben, who fell as the ball reached him. Two singles and an infield out furnished the power for the two tallies needed to win.

An error in the Oakland outfield and a scratch single off the bat of Hal Finney gave the Pirates their only run in the fifth.

Remy Kremer was offered on the mound for the Pirates, Oakland being Remy's home hearth.

WESTINGHOUSE NEXT FOE FOR CHAMPS

By JESS CARVER

Scott High will carry on.

The state scholastic basketball championship is the goal of the North Braddock team, following its easy victory over Duquesne High in the final game of the W. P. I. A. L. series at the Stadium last night, 36 to 11.

At the finish of the team's brilliant and overwhelming sweep through the W. P. I. A. L. series, it was definitely announced last night that the new champions, who displaced New Kensington High as kings of the district scholastic realm, will play Westinghouse High School, representing District VII (City League) and an inter-district game at the Stadium Saturday night.

There had been some talk of Scott's dropping out of the state play in the event last night's game was won and the title secured, but the matter was put up to the boys after the triumph and they voted unanimously to carry on.

RECORD CROWD

The greatest turnout of the year, one that jammed the confines of the Stadium Pavilion to overflowing; that hung from the girders and clung like flies to the window ledges; that sprawled along the sidelines and peered from remote corners of the Pavilion, witnessed the crushing of Duquesne and the crowning of Scott. And what a crushing and what a crowning!

Playing the hero role of the engagement was slender Johnny Krutullis, clever Scott guard. His scoring efforts were confined to a single field goal and one foul, but it is safe to bet that he had his hands on the ball three-fourths of the time. Only a sophomore, Krutullis wrote his name on the scrolls with past heroes of W. P. I. A. L. tourneys.

Duquesne never had a chance. The team, usually a high-scoring aggregation, one that has been formidable in most of its engagements to date, was almost completely stopped. One lone field goal, thrown just before the half ended, by a substitute player, was Duquesne's contribution from the court. A single goal in a W. P. I. A. L. finale makes the most retiring of wall flowers look like Tex Guinan.

The boys tried, but though they shook the tree time after time, the plums simply would not fall. They wouldn't even tremble.

SCOTT TOO FAST

Like a pair of boxers, the teams sparred about the court for the first two minutes of play, and GULFPORT, Miss., March 19.—I see from the box scores, old Jack Quinn is still pitching in the big leagues. That bird broke into baseball the year they fought the Battle of Chickamauga. But if I was Wilbert Robinson I would look up Ponce De Leon's Fountain of Youth while I was in Florida and fill up a carload of demijohns with the stuff. That is just the kind of water Jack Quinn will need to drink along about the eighth inning this season.

GRID OFFICIALS MEET HERE

The cadet corps of West Point will accompany the varsity football team of the Army here for the game with Pitt next fall if at all possible, according to Majs. Phil Fleming and Ralph Sasse, graduate, respectively, manager of athletics and head coach, at the Point.

The genial majors are in town today to attend the annual winter meeting of the Eastern Association for the Selection of Football Officials and at the same time to complete arrangements for the Pitt-Army game. Besides the Army representatives, delegates from Dartmouth, Navy, Harvard, Yale, Princeton, Columbia, Brown, Penn State and Syracuse attended the confab. W. Don Harrison, athletic director, and Coach Jock Sutherland, of Pitt, are hosts to the meeting. Pennsylvania, the twelfth member of the association, was not represented.

"We are greatly pleased to be on the Pitt schedule," Maj. Sasse said, "and expect to collaborate with the Panthers in putting on a great football game here next year. Pittsburgh always has been very hospitable to Army teams, both our track and basketball teams having been royally entertained here in the past."

Maj. Fleming said that the cadet corps of 1,500 men would be brought along if at all possible, and added that present indications pointed to the corps being here.

Local alumni associations of the various colleges are holding luncheons in honor of the visitors at noon today. From here, most of the members will go to Penn State, where the national intercollegiate boxing championships will be held tomorrow and Saturday.

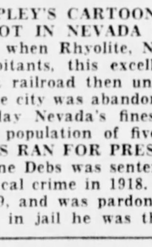
Eastern wrestling moguls claim a match during the impending summer between Jim Londos and Don George, rival claimants of the world heavyweight grappling title, at one of the New York baseball parks would gross $300,000 at the box office, and the funny part of it is they may be correct, with New York having gone so goofy over wrestling . . . . A standing head in all newspaper offices is the one, "DiVodi Wins On Foul." . . . The California Commission is investigating Andy's latest claim, in a bout with Paulie Walker at Los Angeles, night before last, . . . Andy got away with murder in the claiming line in two bouts at the Meyers Bowl, year before last, and ought to be even more accomplished now with all of the practice he's had since leaving these parts . . . Word that George Little, manager of Jack Johnson when Li'l Artha was heavyweight champion, died penniless and alone in Chicago was received with interest in Pittsburgh yesterday, for Little was well known here through Johnson's friendly relations with Frank Sutton, local hotelman . . . Little made and spent a fortune in his lifetime.



Al Grayber

If Oxford should "take" Cambridge in the eighty-third renewal of their annual rowing classic Saturday, it will be the first time in eight years that this has happened, believe it or not.

How would you like to start a boxing career at the age of 16 by taking on such a prominent ringman as Battling Nelson in your first appearance before the public with the padded gloves on your fists? . . . That's exactly what Al Grayber, local referee, did, and he recalled the incident yesterday in connection with the visit here this week of the one-time great Nelson, whose name was a byword in his heyday. . . . Grayber had been hanging around gymnasiums, and had a hankering to be a boxer, but he never even had sparred as an amateur. . . . One day he read in the papers that Nelson would meet all comers for a week at the Gayety Theater. . . . This was just after the Battler had lost the lightweight championship to Ad Wolgast. . . . Grayber asked a friend to arrange to have him be one of the "comers" and the friend failed him, so Al applied in person and was told Nelson was booked up for every night, but to come around on Saturday afternoon. . . . He did, and Nelson took him on after boxing two rounds with each of two other opponents . . . He went three rounds with Grayber and then wound up with a session with Bananas Diamond.

Despite his lack of experience and extreme youth, Grayber says he had no fear of the consequences in offering himself as a sparring partner for Nelson and was surprised to find that the Battler did not hit hard. . . . "However, he kept plod-

By CARL W. SHATTO

The Yellow Jackets will be out to climax one of the greatest comebacks in local hockey history when they meet Buffalo's first-place Bisons at Duquesne Garden tomorrow night in a game that will mark the conclusion of the locals' regular season schedule.

In defeating the Tecumsehs, 1 to 0, in the campaign's most crucial battle at London Tuesday, the Schooley icemen, a poor last after the first few weeks of battling and apparently hopelessly distanced at mid-season, strengthened their hold on fourth place to such an extent that they can clinch their place in the post-season classic by winning tomorrow.

In the event that London loses in Detroit tonight, or in Syracuse on Sunday, a Jacket victory will not be necessary, but should the Tecumsehs win both of their remaining fights the locals will have to down the leaders to retain undisputed possession of their money berth.

TIE NEEDED

A tie with Buffalo will be enough to guarantee Pittsburgh at least another chance to attain the select circle, for the point resulting from a deadlock will increase the locals' lead to such an extent that London can do nothing better than tie the Jackets for fourth place at the finish of the race.

Regardless of how London fares against Detroit tonight, the Schooley stalwarts will be out to "take" Buffalo. The Bisons are the only club in the circuit that has not met defeat at the hands of Pittsburgh this season, and it is imperative that the Bison jinx be broken soon, for Buffalo is to meet the fourth-place club in the title series opener, next Tuesday.

A Pittsburgh win tomorrow means that the fourth-place club which the Bisons will meet in the series opener will be Pittsburgh, and that the scene of the championship inaugural fight will be Duquesne Garden.

London's success or failure in Detroit is no more likely to effect the attendance here tomorrow than it is to effect the locals' determination to take the first-placers. Local fans are eager to acclaim the fighters who covered themselves with glory in the "make or break" duel at London, and a capacity crowd is certain to be in order.

BOBBY JONES' Lessons in Golf

By Robt. Jones.

American Open, British Open, American Amateur and British Amateur Champion.

Bobby Jones

From time to time, I suppose I have been asked on half a hundred occasions what was, in my opinion, the greatest golf match ever played. In answering a question of this kind, I do not like to go beyond my personal observation, and in placing myself on record I do not believe I can afford to take in quite this much territory. I have never yet been present at a P. G. A. championship, where, I am sure a great many fine matches have been played. But I have seen most of the best encounters in the American amateur championship since 1916 and in three British amateurs since 1921.

A few of the outstanding matches which I could name without hesitation were as follows:

The match between Chick Evans and Francis Ouimet at Oakmont in 1919, the match between Travers and Hagen at Garden City in the P. G. A. war relief matches of 1917, the match between Marston and Sweetser in the American amateur championship of 1923 at Flossmoor, the match between Von Elm and Hezlet in the Walker Cup bout at St. Andrews in 1926 and the match between Don Moe and Bill Stout at Sandwich in the international match last year.

MANY FINE MATCHES

Of course, the oldtimers probably will say that no list of outstanding matches is complete without mention of the historic Herreshoff-Hilton match at Apawamis in 1911, when the great little Englishman won our amateur championship on the thirty-seventh green. But that was considerably before my time. In later years I suppose that the Hagen-Sarazen affair at Pelham in the final of the P. G. A. championship of 1923 should also come in. But my testimony with respect to that is likewise incompetent.

To pick out one match from the list enumerated above is a pretty tough assignment; but I think that for pure, unadulterated sensation, the Moe-Stout match puts it pretty well over the others. Each of the other four tussles was a dog-fight from start to finish, with both contestants at one another's throat throughout the match, with never a commanding advantage on either side. But in all the long history of the game I think there has never been a recovery as brilliant accomplished against so uncompromising an opponent.

In many respects a comparison between this match and the famous Von Elm-Mackenzie encounter at Merion in 1924 would show a close parallel, except for two important facts. First, Mackenzie did not win, although his brilliant rally carried the match to the thirty-seventh green after he had been 8 down with 14 holes to play; and, second, that Von Elm in losing his big lead made a few more mistakes than did Bill Stout against Moe.

GREAT COMEBACK

That Moe-Stout match is more or less recent history, and its details probably are so well recalled that it is not necessary to recount them. But a brief resume will serve to show what a tremendous thing it was. Young Don, playing in his first competition abroad, found the long-driving Englishman in one of his most devastating moods, and in the morning round he bumped squarely into a fine 71 by Stout. That left Don 4 down at luncheon, and in the afternoon Stout opened up 3-3-3, which made the margin 7 holes with 15 to play, and it looked as if the kid would be overwhelmed.

But beginning with the fourth hole Don shot the works. When I saw him hole a putt of six feet for a birdie 3 at the ninth green, after a grand pitch, it was his fifth 3 in six holes, and he continued in this vein until, when they stood on the thirty-sixth tee, the match was square and then came the finish, which was entirely worthy of this marvelous effort. I wondered what poor Bill Stout must have thought, when, after all that had happened, he watched Don fire a long iron second from a hanging lie up stone dead against the pin.

It must be remembered that throughout this afternoon round Stout himself was playing fine golf and not giving away a thing. Moe's play during the afternoon round was most aptly characterized in an expostulation which Stout himself told me was made to him by one of his friends. After Don had won back five holes, Stout said he was walking down the fairway, wondering what it was all about when his friend touched him on the arm and said:

"My word, Bill—this is not golf; it's visitation from God!"

OVEREND MADE PRESIDENT OF NEW BODY

The leading colleges and universities of the tri-state district have banded together to form what is to be known as the Tri-State Association for the selection of basketball officials.

At a meeting held yesterday at the P. A. A., representatives from Pitt, Tech, Duquesne, Wash.-Jeff, West Virginia, Geneva, Thiel, Westminster, Waynesburg, Grove City, Allegheny and St. Vincent's signified their intentions of carrying out such an organization, elected officers, a board of directors and discussed possible choices of a commissioner.

The duties of this commissioner will be to select officials for all basketball games participated in by members of the association. Bethany, invited to attend yesterday's meeting, but not represented; West Virginia Wesleyan, Marshall and Davis-Elkins will later be invited to join.

Clarence G. Overend, graduate manager of athletics at Carnegie Tech, was elected president, and Harry Adam Stansbury, who holds the same position at West Virginia, was chosen secretary and treasurer.

Six were elected to the board of directors, two to serve three years, two to serve two, and two to serve one. The three-year members are Stansbury and Overend; the two-year members, Robert E. Thorn, of Grove City, and W. Don Harrison, of Pitt, and the one-year members, Athletic Director Way, of Allegheny, and A. C. Edgecomb, of Geneva.

Officials of the district were discussed with the view of selecting a list of approved arbiters. From this list the eventual commissioner will appoint officials for all games.

The representatives were guests of Buddy Overend at a luncheon prior to the meeting.

PIRATES PLAY TIGERS TODAY

The big Frenchman blanked the Oaks on one hit in four rounds.

George Grant relieved Kremer in the fifth, and his performance up to the time of the Sankey slip was unique. In this interim, the Rochester pitcher did not allow a hit. The Buccos made only three hits in all, while the best the enemy could get was four safeties.

Skipper Ens lifted many of his regulars early on account of conditions. He threw a flock of Yans into action. The kids were glad to get the chance, and Ens apparently thought it better judgment to risk the victory than to endanger the safety of his first-choice players.

Clausner Goes To India

Charlie Clausner, the genial tire merchant at the exit of the city (Pittsburgh end of the Liberty Bridge Ramp), has several outstanding qualities. The first and foremost is that he is loyal to his customers—or, as they say on the stage, "his Dear Public." Secondly, he knows tires. And those two outstanding qualities explain why he changed from a good line to an infinitely better line—the India line. One day Charlie was sitting in his proprietor's chair watching the evening sun go down (you remember the day we had the sun), and he was thinking of how his customers trusted him. "Am I giving them the best?" Charlie quizzed himself. In service, the answer was "Yes." In products he thought he was—but there was an element of doubt. The India Rubber Co., out in Ohio, was making a pretty special product these days. Perhaps he'd better look into it. The result was that Charlie with typical Clausner thoroughness, subjected the India line to far more rigorous tests than any made in rubber factories—and he was satisfied. Now he carries the India line, in his own words, "The finest assortment of tires he has ever seen." Charlie will probably tell you why. If you ask him. Drop in today.

If You Can Pick the Expensive Custom Bootmakers' Originals from the Regal Reproductions—

We'll Give You a Pair of Shoes

This week, Friday and Saturday, we are showing in all Regal Shoe store windows, 8 of the most expensive and exclusive styles for Spring 1931, produced by the best Custom Bootmakers in the world, and reproduced by Regal for you at $6.60.

Beside each of the 8 Original Custom Bootmaker's models, we are placing the Regal Reproduction. For instance, if the "Right" of any pair was made by the King's Own Bootmaker in London and cost us £5.17.6 or $28.60—the "Left" shoe of the same pair is the Regal Reproduction, and costs you $6.60.

We don't know how to make the comparison any easier for you or the test more difficult for us. And if you can pick the 8 Original Custom models from the 8 Regal Reproductions during the compare contest, we'll make you a present of a pair of Regal Shoes.

But it isn't as simple as it sounds. The lasts are identical in measurement and appearance, and in most instances we are using the same Upper Leather as in the Original Custom Made Model.

Some of our own men couldn't tell the difference between the Original and Reproduction in our own windows. When we showed the two shoes together to the Custom Bootmakers in England, they had great difficulty in picking the shoe they made from the Regal Reproduction.

We then sawed the shoe in halves and let them examine the solid leather heel, the outer sole, inner sole, counter, toe box, lining, upper leather, and they were amazed at the value that we could put into a shoe to sell for $6.60. (See Bartley & Sons' letter)

Which is Which?

$28.60 in London or $6.60 in U. S. A.

One of these shoes is the Original Custom Model—a full brogue by Bartley & Sons, of London, bootmakers to the Prince of Wales, and cost us £5.17.6 ($28.60) in London.

The other is the Regal Reproduction and costs you $6.60.

BOUSSUS, CLIFF SUTTER ARE ELIMINATED

NEW YORK, March 19.—(AP.)—Clifford Sutter, of New Orleans, and Christian Boussus, of France, second-seeded favorites on the American and French lists, respectively, were eliminated in the men's national indoor tennis championship tournament, in straight sets, yesterday.

Herbert L. Bowman, of New York, fifth seeded American, was also eliminated, while Jean Borotra, leading French contender, advanced to the semi-final in a two-set victory.

Pierre Landry, of France, and Berkley Bell, of Austin, Tex., seed third on their respective lists, both advanced, as did William Aydelotte, of New York, sixth seeded American.

Perrine G. Rockafellow, of the New York Athletic Club, a seasoned indoor player, created an upset by defeating Sutter, 6-1, 6-2, and going into the semi-final round with Borotra as his opponent.

Boussus was upset by the brilliant performance of Aydelotte, national indoor champion in 1928, 8-6, 6-2. Landry took only two sets to eliminate Bowman, 6-3, 6-4. Bell had an easy time with E. N. Brandt, New York, 6-1, 6-2.

Frank Shields meets Landry in one of the lower half quarter-final matches today, the other being between Bell and Aydelotte.

SCOTT DEFEATS DUQUESNE

then, in the next three, Scott banged out in front by seven points, leading at the end of the period by 9 to 2. Johnny Tomko, Scott's swellish captain, started the scoring with a field goal and added a second before the finish of the quarter.

The second quarter really ushered in the new champion. Sixteen big points, on six field goals and four fouls, enabled Scott to pile up an advantage of 25 to 5 at the half and stow the game safely away.

There wasn't a field goal counted in the third quarter, Scott making two out of three fouls and Duquesne as many out of four. Duquesne was trying mightily, but trying was as far as they got.

Three more goals and three fouls completed the total of the victors in the final session, with Duquesne dumping in four fouls. Scott used almost a complete second team during the last minutes of this period.

SERVICK STOPPED

Al Servick, the ace of the Duquesne team, was stopped cold. He missed two shots early in the first period, and then Scott took time out and shifted its defense. Kuno relinquishing the job of watching Servick and Krutullis taking it on. Later, Tomko was assigned to watch the Red and White star. At that, the honor of ending the scoring for the game fell to him, he dropping in a foul just before the ultimate gun.

Tomko, with five field goals and two fouls, led in the scoring, totaling one more point than the entire Duquesne team and making just twice as many as any two Duke players.

Vic Bache, Scott's center, chased Karpowich, the Duquesne pivot man, from the game early. Ferguson, Tomko's running mate at forward, absorbed no mouse's share of the spotlight. Kuno's southpaw hook passes zipped through the bewildered Duquesne defense on more than one occasion to pave the way for field goals. The lineup:

Scott—36.		Duquesne—11.
Tomko (C)	F	(C) Servick
Ferguson	F	Zeleznik
Bache	C	Karpowich
Krutullis	G	Alexandrovich
Kuno	G	Durik

REGATTA DATE CHANGED

NEW YORK, March 19.—(INS.)—The Poughkeepsie regatta, in which practically every crew in the country except the "Big Three"—Yale, Harvard and Princeton—will compete, will be held about 10 days earlier than the historic event usually is held. When the Board of Stewards of the Intercollegiate Rowing Association met in January, it selected June 17 as the date, the earliest in more than 25 years, but it was learned today the date for the event had been changed to the day ahead, June 16.

MAJORS IN REPOSE

Maj. Philip Fleming Maj. Ralph Sasse

West Point's two genial majors, Philip Fleming, graduate manager of athletics, and Ralph Sasse, head football coach, in Pittsburgh today to attend the winter meeting of the Eastern Association for the Selection of Football Officials and to go into a huddle with Pitt officials on plans for the Pitt-Army game in the stadium here next fall.

BELMONT FACES BIG CHANCE

By HARRY KECK
Sports Editor.

Jimmy Belmont, young Slavish welterweight boxing protege of Frank Klaus, of Braddock, former middleweight champion of the world, has much at stake in his battle with Billy Alger, Phoenix (Ariz.) and Reading (Pa.) veteran, in the windup at McKeesport tonight, when, in addition to Klaus, he will have Battling Nelson, former lightweight champion, in his corner.

Jimmy will be aiming for his sixth straight victory under the Klaus banner, after his indifferent success up to the time he joined up with the onetime bearcat. The first four of these were knockout triumphs, and, in the fifth, he won over Joe Trippe, of Rochester, N. Y., a favorite with the Tube City fans.

TO HEAD EAST SOON

A victory over Alger, who has met many of the stars, will call wide attention to the fistic efforts of young Jimmy, and many matchmakers in the East already have their eyes on him, as a result of Klaus' recent trip to Miami, Fla., for the Primo Carnera-Jim Maloney bout. While in the South, the former champion rubbed elbows with Tom McArdle, matchmaker of Madison Square Garden, New York; Eddie Mack, the Boston promoter, and Muggsy Taylor, of Philadelphia, among others, and interested all of them in his boxer. They promised to send for Jimmy and his famous manager at the earliest opportunity, and all Jimmy has to do is to keep winning to hasten the day when he will head for their spacious arenas. These veteran promoters sense the advertising value of a tieup with a fistic figure like Klaus and the Big Opportunity is just around the corner for Belmont.

MTIERNAN FEUD ON

Incidentally, another chance for the young Braddock fist-slinger lies in a match with Buck McTiernan, of Swissvale, his archrival, which may be made as the opening feature of the outdoor season at the Meyers Bowl, North Braddock, which is right in the backyard, so to speak, of both mittmen. Even when Jimmy was struggling along, with McTiernan grabbing off the top spots last year, Belmont's followers were telling the world that McTiernan was one fellow Jimmy could beat. They haven't met since their amateur days, and it will be a natural when they get together. They don't even speak to each other now, so the feud is on for keeps.

The Klaus-Nelson hookup for tonight has the fans of Pittsburgh and McKeesport and environs by the ears, and Promoter Jim McGirr, a genial soul, is smiling his broadest smile in many months as he envisions a near-sellout. His advance sale is a knockout.

Bruno Sala, of Donora, and Sunny Jim McVey, Negro, of Braddock, stablemate of Belmont, box the semi-final of the McKeesport show, with U. S. Carpentier, of New Kensington, against Joe Bazzone, of McKeesport, in the second bout, and Johnny Montebano, of Braddock, and Jimmy Lozies, of McKeesport, in the opener.

Between Rounds

Maxie Rosenbloom, light-heavyweight champion, meets Joe Banovic in a non-title bout at Scranton tonight. Johnny Erickson boxes Frankie (Kid) Anslem in New York and Charley Dunlap tangles with Jack Hussey in Columbus. O. Young Kelchel and Nick Venore battle in Philadelphia.

Teddy Welch, of McKeesport, will not box Ted Yarosz at Canton, O., next Monday night, as advertised, according to his manager, Joe Dubransky, who says Teddy will not be in condition to go to the post again for a couple of weeks.

Buddy McArthur, light-heavyweight, of McKeesport, returns to his former home, Saginaw, Mich., to box Ace Martin, of Detroit, in a 10-round main bout, April 24. Benny McArthur will box Johnny Moore, of Flint, Mich., in another 10-round bout on the card.

Georgie Tomosky, Turtle Creek bantamweight, boxes in the Pennsylvania Railroad bouts at Trenton, N. J., next Monday night and will be available for other battles after that date.

Jimmy Reilly, of McKeesport, boxes Sammy Vogel in a six-rounder in Erie tomorrow night.

Don Asto and Charley Crovatta will be among the stars of the Al Sands A. C., amateur boxing team, of Uniontown, which will meet the Robins A. C. on Cheat Road, this district, match at the Keystone A. C. tomorrow night. Seven bouts are scheduled.

Jimmy Johnston, who will promote with Humbert Fugazy, of Brooklyn during the coming summer, declares he will tie up Jack Sharkey, Victorio Campolo, Kid Chocolate and Jack (Kid) Berg to the Madison Square Garden interests or will not be able to do business with them.

The boxing card for the Moose Temple tomorrow night is one of the most attractive ever arranged by Promoter Apples Meyers since the season got under way in the downtown arena. It consists of two 10-round features and a pair of six-round preliminaries. Jockey Walters, Springfield (O.) Negro knockout puncher, gets his first real local test when he meets the veteran Dal Silvers, of New York, in the main event, while Mose Butch, of Oakland, and Johnny Warner, long-time bantamweight rivals, finally get together after three postponements, in the 10-round semi-final. Marvin Sale, Negro, and Billy Flanagan, local middleweight sockers, box the second bout and Terry Waner and Steve Senich meet in the opener.

Benny Touchstone will arrive here Sunday morning from Detroit and work out publicly in the Motor Square Garden next afternoon for his 10-round windup with Emmett Rocco, Ellwood City heavyweight, at the Garden Monday night.

The A. M. A. senior championship annual boxing tournament at the Moose Temple next Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday evenings has attracted 123 entries.

The preliminary card for the Rocco-Touchstone show at the Garden next Monday night has been completed with Dominick Petrone, of New York and Pittsburgh, against Steve Nugent, of Cleveland, in the eight-round semi-final, Jack Tracey, local Negro middleweight, and Red Le Day, of Braddock, in the second bout, and Anson Green, Negro, of Homestead, and Larry Conners (formerly Dave McConnell), of the North Side, in the opener.

Fight Results

At Newark, O., Billy Tibbs and Red King drew, 10 rounds; Jim Ertear knocked out Chuck Temple, 1 round; Ed Cooper knocked out Kirk Kirkendahl, 4 rounds; Jack Moore knocked out (technical) Buck McNeal, 2 rounds; Young Spring defeated Kid Priest, 4 rounds; Young Wilson defeated Joe Rizzo, 4 rounds.

SCHNEIDERS OUT TO WIN LAURELS

By JULIUS LEVIN

The Ray E. Schneiders will be out to sew up the championship of the West Penn League tonight when they meet the Knickerbockers, of Lawrenceville, on the North Side Moose floor. The Ray E. Schneiders, who won the first-half championship with comparative ease, can clinch the second-round laurels by taking tonight's contest. A victory for the Aldermen will make a play-off series unnecessary.

In the Pittsburgh Junior Church League, Central Pittsburgh Juniors will be the attraction of the Faith Chapel Juniors.

Manchester Community Lyceum, champion of the Greater Pittsburgh League, opposes the North Side Collegians in an independent game on the Manchester floor tonight, and tomorrow invades the Irene Kaufmann Settlement House to clash with Ziggy Kahn's passers. These two clubs have been rivals for many years, and their games usually keep the fans on their toes from start to finish. In their last meeting, Manchester defeated the I. K. S. by a single point.

The Y. M. H. A. entertains the P. R. R. team, of Cleveland, in an independent game on the Y. floor. In the preliminary, the Varsity B. passers meet the Wilmerding Y. quintet, runner-up in the recent state Y. M. C. A. tournament. Next Thursday the Y. M. H. A. winds up its season against the Original Coffey Club.

St. John's won the championship of the Catholic Lyceum League last night in whipping St. Wendelin's, 40 to 17. The Trinity Royals deadlocked for the lead in the Senior Church League by tripping Faith Chapel, 28-22.

W. VA. BOXERS BLANK PITT

MORGANTOWN, W. Va., March 19.—Pitt's boxing team was no match for the West Virginia University sluggers, and the Mountaineers closed their season with a 7-0 victory here last night.

West Virginia got off to a lead in the 115-pound bout when Joe Heatherman shaded Cunti. Charley Morrison's early advantage in the 125-pound bout with Milt Bradley enabled him to add a second point to the Mountaineers' total. Santicola, the Pitt 135-pounder, never had a chance against Harry Hesse, West Virginia's 6-foot-2 lightweight, and Referee Simendinger stopped the fight in the second round, awarding the Mountaineer a technical knockout. The summary:

115-pound class—Heatherman, West Virginia, outpointed Cunti, Pitt, three rounds.

125-pound class—Morrison, West Virginia, gained the referee's decision over Bradley, Pitt, three rounds.

135-pound class—Hesse, West Virginia, scored a technical knockout over Santicola, Pitt, in the second round.

145-pound class—Capt. Stunkard, West Virginia, won on a decision from Marrion, Pitt, in three rounds.

160-pound class—Latham, West Virginia, knocked out Zimmerman, Pitt, in first round.

Heavyweight class—Hawkins, West Virginia, gained the decision over Luck, Pitt, in three rounds.

City League Likely To Be Six-Club Loop

At a meeting of the City League baseball chiefs last night it was indicated that the loop will operate as a six-club circuit this season. Another meeting is to be held next Wednesday.

The J. L. Thomas team is to meet Sunday afternoon in its club parlors.

The infield of the Homewood-Brushton baseball club this season probably will be made up of Dave Wickline, first base; Frank Anthony, second base; Paul Murphy, shortstop, and Heinie Boll, third base.

ding after me and punching with both fists," Al said. "I believe I can safely say that, by moving about and boxing carefully, I outpointed him, but the wearing effect of his boring-in style began to have its effect on me in the last round, when I tired so badly I thought the round never would end. I could readily see how he was able to beat all of those good fighters over a route."

That battle with Nelson marking Grayber's debut in the ring was staged on April 20, 1910, and Al's last appearance as a boxer was against Jimmy Byrne, the southpaw heavyweight, of Louisville, then just out of the Navy, in California, in 1924. . . . After his exhibition with Nelson, Grayber innocently asked the Battler if the latter wanted him to return for the evening performance and Nelson smiled and said, "No, that will be all for today, son." . . . Red Mason, who had been in the wings, then approached Grayber and offered to manage him, and, on May 3, got him his first professional fight, with Harry (Kid) Meyers, of Chicago, who subbed for Cy Seibert, now a local manager of boxers, in a preliminary to a bout between Buck Crouse and Pete Connors in Duquesne Garden . . . Some years later, Grayber and Harry Greb fought an elimination to see which of the middleweights would remain with Mason, and, although the newspaper decisions were divided, Greb was the one who stayed and he went on to win two championships before he died . . . Grayber now is a city detective and is rated as one of the best boxing referees in local history.—HARRY KECK.

How This Man Contrived To Win Business

—By B. C. FORBES—

WHEN A southern friend urged me to come and visit him—and his golf course—I pleaded busyness. His comeback was:

"Come and I'll write your column for you—I know a good business story that should be told."

He sent me the following, which I am sure you will agree is interesting so I have succumbed.

Mr. Forbes

I. B. Tigrett, president of the Gulf, Mobile and Northern Railroad, has done a unique job with this once small but now strategic line.

He has given special consideration to the human element both among the employes of the road and among the people of the territory it serves. It has become a community road.

And now we hear it is about to become a part of the great Burlington system, providing a direct line from Chicago and the Central West to the ports of Mobile and New Orleans.

Mr. Tigrett didn't tell me this, but he admitted that negotiations have been under way for some time. The Burlington now owns a substantial block of stock. It is likely that it will soon be represented on the Gulf, Mobile and Northern board. The Interstate Commerce Commission has given its consent.

WHEN THE Gulf, Mobile and Northern was "handed back" by the government after the war, it was a 400-mile stretch of rusty rails, built largely as a lumber road through a territory whose timber was rapidly being removed. Its chief occupation seemed to be clearing away wrecks. Its revenues appeared to be going largely for damage suits.

The directors were looking for a president. They "picked on" I. B. Tigrett, to use his own phrase. He was not a railroad man. He was a quiet, unassuming, but successful banker in Jackson, Tenn. He still is that, being president of I. B. Tigrett & Co., the oldest bond house in the South. He had started life with the usual wealth of other Baptist ministers' sons, and had demonstrated his ability to deal successfully with both men and money.

A lumber road in a country being stripped of its timber could face but two possibilities—quit entirely, or develop new business. The latter course Mr. Tigrett chose.

HE RELATES:

"We started among the road's employes and in the homes of the people along the line. We employed a lady as home demonstration agent. She was a great personality and a genius for co-operation and leadership. No other railway, so far as I know, had tried such an experiment.

"This lady spent her time visiting in homes along the road, teaching gardening, canning, poultry raising, home economics and health. The people liked her and absorbed her teachings. Their home life improved. Their savings accounts increased.

"A man trained in agriculture and industry was employed to organize and direct a development department. This department taught the people new ways of making a living from agriculture, dairying, mining and stock raising. It has induced new settlers to buy and improve the cheap cut-over lands. It has brought canning factories, cheese factories, and larger manufacturing plants."

BOTH THE people along the road and the employes began to speak of "our road."

Mr. Tigrett reduced the cost of cows. Juries in damage suits refused to place exorbitant values on animals found dead by the railway track. It was "our road."

Mr. Tigrett told me this incident:

"Some time ago an automobile driven by an inexperienced driver ran into the side of one of our passenger trains, and a death resulted. A jury gave a verdict against the railroad for $20,000. The people so keenly recognized the injustice of such a judgment that a petition was signed by a very large number of citizens, asking the judge to set aside the verdict."

Last year the road had the lowest percentage of accidents of all those in the country in its class.

THIS TEAMWORK among employes and citizens has had its effect. The road has grown and prospered and expanded its facilities. Most of its mileage is in the agricultural state of Mississippi, serving such important cities as Jackson, Laurel and Meridian. It has been extended north through Jackson, Tenn., to Paducah, Ky., the southern terminus of the Burlington.

This humanized road, now more than 1,000 miles long, is today a vital factor not only in developing its territory, but in giving the great Burlington system the prospect of two ports on the gulf, which no western railroad now has. Its improvements in dock facilities in New Orleans alone indicate large plans for the future.

A REAL story, don't you agree?

FARRELL SEES TRADE GAIN

NEW YORK, March 19.—(AP.)—Signs are apparent of a steady though gradual improvement in world trade, James A. Farrell, president of the United States Steel Corporation and chairman of the national foreign trade council, said today in issuing a call for the eighteenth national foreign trade convention. The meetings will be held in New York May 27, 28 and 29. He said:

"There are indications that the worldwide depression in business, with which we have been dealing for several months, is subsiding and that the upturn is beginning.

"Our commerce confronts a situation which merits the consideration of all concerned in foreign trade. It is a time for thorough examination of economic conditions, and for practical demonstration of that spirit and habit of co-operation that so signally marks American foreign trade practice."

1930 Crude Gypsum Production Down

WASHINGTON, March 19.—The general falling off in the building construction industry throughout the United States in 1930 was reflected in the total output of crude gypsum mined, production decreasing approximately 33 per cent from the previous year. The Mines Bureau places the production for the year at 3,368,432 short tons.

U. S. Plate Glass Production Up

The production of polished plate glass in the United States for the month of February was 8,881,520 square feet, as compared to 7,320,675 square feet produced in the preceding month and 9,804,464 square feet produced in the corresponding month of last year.

Bank of France.

PARIS, March 19.—The weekly statement of the Bank of France shows these changes in francs: Gold increased 12,000,000; sight balances abroad decreased 11,000,000; bills discounted at home decreased 208,000,000; bills bought abroad increased 1,000,000; advances decreased 30,000,000; circulation decreased $18,000,000; current accounts increased 238,000,000. Rate of discount, 2 per cent.

STOCK MARKET MAKES WIDE ADVANCE

Vigorous Drive Halted by Bulls Who Were Content To Defend New Position

NEW YORK, March 19.—(AP.)—Bulls opened their heavy artillery in today's stock market for the first time this month.

After a vigorous drive against the bears in the first hour, however, the offensive was halted and bulls were content to defend their new position. Trading was in large volume in the first hour, but slackened as the day wore on.

General Motors was brought forward as a leader, a role in which it has served infrequently since its violent rise of 1928.

This prominent motor issue sold up 2 points into new high ground for 1931 around 47. Other issues breaking into new high ground included McKeesport Tin Plate, Johns Manville and du Pont, rising 2 to 4 points.

The market was still a professional affair, and in the main failed to show signs of breaking out of its recent trading range. The movement in stocks was in contrast to the sluggish action of the bond market, which still seemed to be weighed down by uncertainty over further Treasury financing to meet the larger than expected veterans' loan demand.

The move in General Motors was accompanied by brokerage house gossip to the effect that the corporation would not earn its dividend in the first quarter, but expected the momentum which has been developed in March to carry well into the second quarter, so that net for the entire first half should easily cover dividends for that period. Furthermore, it was pointed out that statistics on new car registrations for the first 28 states to report for February showed Chevrolet Motor Company well ahead of Ford Motor for the second successive month.

The veterans' loans are frequently indicated as a stimulus to motor car buying, and appear to be stimulating furniture sales. While Wall Street in the main regards this as mere inflation, some commentators are pointing to it as a bullish stock market factor, and testimony as to fundamental business improvement is not lacking. James A. Farrell, president of the United States Steel Corporation, in calling a meeting of the Nation Foreign Trade Council, again voices his opinion that the world depression is subsiding and the upturn beginning.

Commodity price trends were mixed. The sugar market was notably firmer, with refiners expecting to increase prices 1/10 of a cent to 4½ cents tomorrow. On the other hand, bar silver reacted ⅝ of a cent. The seriousness of the commodity price situation appears again in a report of the livestock advisory committee of the farm board which stated that prices of all meat animals are below production costs.

Credit conditions were about stationary, although commercial paper rates were shaded a little.

U. S. Interests Get Berlin Electric

BERLIN, March 19.—(INS.)—The first step in desocialization of German public utilities was taken here today when the Berlin administration announced acceptance of a 75,000,000 mark loan from a consortium of international bankers.

The loan marks the first stage in sale of the Berlin Municipal Electric Works for a total of 560,000,000 marks and eventually will place virtual control of the electric works in the hands of American bankers.

The loan was granted by a purchasing consortium headed by Harris Forbes & Co., Otis and Schroeder and the Chase National Bank.

Wage Cuts Unsound in Most Cases

By GEORGE H. SNYDER

AMERICAN CORPORATIONS HAVE developed economic fetiches during the past year of business depression. The worship of low costs was helpful at first, but recently it has been carried to excess. Some of the economies placed into effect have resulted in real savings in operating costs. Others have caused temporary savings which will be costly in the long run because of the serious damage done to organization efficiency.

During the early part of the business depression it is quite probable that many companies eliminated a major share of the dead wood which may be found in nearly all organizations. They got rid of departments and individuals where results were not justifying their places in the general schemes of sales and production.

Morale Disrupted

WHILE CUTS IN FORCES may have been helpful up to a certain point, many of the leading corporations have utterly disrupted the morale of their organizations by carrying their economical efforts to unwise lengths. E. T. Weir, head of the sixth largest steel producing organization in the United States, has declared that no wage cut has ever saved money for a corporation. He contends that the dissatisfaction caused by such steps results in a lowering of efficiency which eliminates the direct savings from wage cuts.

Some organizations have been successful in convincing employes that wage cuts offer the only alternative to reducing working forces. In general, proposals of this sort have been met in a spirit of friendly co-operation. But some large corporations have continued to reduce the number of workers on their payrolls after cutting wages. This, naturally, has been responsible for such general resentment that the entire spirit of co-operation among employes has been destroyed.

Two Solutions Offered

TWO SOLUTIONS ARE COMMONLY presented to solve current economic problems. One proposes the deflation of wages in line with reductions in commodity prices. The other proposes the maintenance of a high standard of wages to keep buying power from being permanently reduced instead of merely suffering from a temporary setback.

It is strange that so little attention has been paid to the human element in these discussions. Both sides have considered the problem from its purely economic aspects. While such reasoning appears to be sound, it fails to give weight to the effect on business efficiency and on individual productive capacity which will follow any general wage deflation.

Last Slump Not Comparable

THE 1920 AND 1921 DEPRESSION was accompanied by a deflation of wages but conditions were not altogether the same. During the war, labor received exceptionally high wages. They were high in comparison to commodity prices as well as in comparison with previous years. The deflation of prices and wages happened quickly. While some unemployment resulted from the adjustment, it reached no such proportions as are found at present. The slump at that time was more of an adjustment from war to peace conditions than a correction of a purely economic situation.

The current depression is no such obvious correction of conditions as that of the slump of 10 years ago. It has been more lasting and far-reaching in its effects. The adjustment is not taking place to correct wages paid during an abnormal shortage of labor and commodities attributable to war conditions. Reductions in wages, with an accompanying depression in buying power and a reduction in industrial efficiency due to dissatisfaction, threaten to materially lengthen the period of depression without any compensating economic benefits.

Some economies may help industry, but discretion is necessary to determine which may have lasting benefits and which will do more harm than good.

Long-Term Financing by Treasury Department Expected by June

Reports that the Treasury Department would be in the market with a new issue of certificates early next month naturally aroused much discussion of the prospective activities of the government's financial arm over the ensuing months. It was pointed out, among other things, that the Treasury will have to provide for something like $250,000,000 discount bills maturing in the near future without giving consideration to what soldier bonus payments may entail. In bond circles the guess was ventured that the Treasury might give consideration to another piece of long-term financing between now and the middle of June depending, of course, on how conditions in the investment market shape up in the interval. It is felt that the Treasury would if it could be done conveniently, replace some of its short loans with a moderately long-term bond issue.

Those who follow the market on the basis of charts and graphs are confident that there is every prospect for a substantial rally in the near future. These same traders admit openly that so far as business and news in general is concerned, the market bulls are likely to receive little nourishment over the next few months. But the industrial chart, they claim, shows a perfect picture, in the parlance of the line readers, for a rise worth following. These observers take the stand that the side-wise movement of the market since the setback from the February tops has provided the necessary correction of the technical position which might otherwise have obtained through a more extensive reaction.

Some close students of the market believe its recent action has been of a nature which might possibly denote an attempt at distribution is in progress. On several occasions now the market has been subject to rather heavy selling pressure in final dealings with early trading the following day showing a complete absence of such pressure. This was the case as concerned the closing on Tuesday and the opening yesterday.

In quarters where such attempts at distribution are suspected it is contended that if selling which comes into the market near the closing on a given day was primarily for bear account, that element would almost certainly follow up with a further drive at the list the following morning. Thus far, however, such early selling after a decline near the close of a previous day has been notable for its absence.

The General Electric report for last year was not particularly inspiring, that is, on the basis of operating results shown. The financial position of the company, however, was still revealed as a bulwark of strength with actual cash on hand standing at $141,717,851, compared with total cash and government securities of $123,702,969 at the end of 1929. Earnings naturally reflected the let-down in business activity last year, showing the equivalent of $1.90 a share earned for the stock against $2.24 in 1929. The discouraging feature, however, was found in the sharp reduction in the total of new business on the books at the beginning of this year, the figure being $56,962,000, contrasted with $94,623,000 going into 1930.

The trade papers, while reporting sustained expansion in demand for steel, seemed inclined to be a trifle guarded in their observations. The Iron Age finds the motor and construction industries still supplying the bulk of the new and prospective tonnage, with operations of the industry having been stepped up in 57 per cent of capacity from 55 per cent a week ago. But while automobile demand is reported persistent it is indicated by the decline of $2 a ton reported in automobile sheet prices at Pittsburgh and a similar decline in black sheets that there is considerable competition for this particular business.

American Tobacco is the logical leader of the tobacco group. Traders who consider the outlook for those stocks favorable are inclined to pick up that stock on reactions. In addition to the good record of the company in its sales of cigarets, as compared with the total figures for cigaret production, American Tobacco is helped by its ownership of about 70 per cent of the voting stock of American Cigar, which includes in its output one of the popular 5-cent cigars, the sales of which have been increasing recently, although a substantial decline has taken place in total cigar consumption.

Travers' Mother Plans to See English Actress

CHAPTER XXX.

Larry and Jenny came over later in the evening for just a few minutes. Larry had a word with Mary Lou.

"Have you told her?" he asked.

"No, not yet. I shall, tonight."

She smiled at him. Her eyes were hard and bright as jewels.

"Are you all right?" he wanted to know anxiously.

"Well? Of course! Why not? Don't be silly, Larry. . . ." and she was gone from him, a slender streak of flame in a coral gown.

But Lorrimer, although he tried, never succeeded in getting her alone for a minute that evening.

At 11 o'clock they had all gone upstairs. Margaret was undressed and reading in bed when there came a knock on the door which connected her rooms with those of Mary Lou.

"It's me," said Mary Lou with a fine disregard of grammar, "may I come in?"

"Dear, of course!"

Tells Mrs. Lorrimer

She came in, wearing her pale water-lily green pajamas and the little black and gold lame jacket, her feet in golden mules, her hair in curly confusion. She sat down on a low chair by Margaret's wide bed and leaned her fragrant cheek against the older woman's slim hand.

"Does the arm ache tonight?" she asked.

"No—" Margaret smiled. It did ache a little. But that didn't matter. What mattered was—Mary Lou. . . . She wanted to ask her. "Does . . . the heart ache, tonight?" She thought that it did. The girl's eyes had such a look of deep, veiled pain in them. "What's wrong, dear?" asked Mrs. Lorrimer.

"Nothing. Everything's right. Larry came to tell me. . . . Oh, please—" begged Mary Lou, "please don't get upset. . . . He told me. . . . he has found . . . Delight Harford."

Mrs. Lorrimer stiffened suddenly and then relaxed. A sigh escaped her. She then said a curious thing, a brutal thing, one might believe.

"So she is alive. I hoped she was dead," said Mrs. Lorrimer.

"Yes, she's alive," Mary Lou murmured.

"Where is she? Is he sure?"

"In New York. Yes, he's sure. She told him," Mary Lou said and forced herself to repeat the story, word for word as she had heard it.

After a minute Mrs. Lorrimer said, briskly:

"I see. After looking for her all these years . . . well . . . I'll—the story must be investigated. I don't believe he will want us to—to say anything to Travers. Not yet. Go to bed now, and try to sleep."

She was efficient, executive, not, it seemed, at all perturbed. Or if she were, she did not show it.

She drew Mary Lou close to her, kissed the cold, small mouth.

"Try and sleep," she repeated. . . .

But at her touch, Mary Lou's tears came again, fell on the other woman's face, and then, as the girl bowed her head, on her hands.

"It's just . . . ," she sobbed, trying to control herself. . . . "I can't bear . . . when he finds out . . . the part I played . . . all the lies . . . and to leave you—" said Mary Lou incoherently.

"You won't leave me. We'll muddle through this somehow. There may be another girl of that name—"

"No, she said she knew him—"

"I know. Go to bed, darling . . . leave it in my hands. . . ."

After Mary Lou had left her Margaret Lorrimer lay in the darkness and thought.

Doctor Summoned

But it had to be faced. She had to find out if Travers and this woman had been married. If they had, perhaps she could be bought off and Travers need never know. Yet, as far as Mary Lou was concerned that was no solution. She sighed and turned restlessly on her pillows. Her arm began to ache furiously. She'd have to get some sleep and be fit to see Dan and Larry in the morning. But before anything was done, anything settled, she would see this woman for herself. . . .

If she had not known before, as a certainty, that Mary Lou was in love with Lorrimer, she knew it now. And now, more than ever, it complicated things for them all.

In the morning Mrs. Lorrimer sent for Dr. Mathews. Later, he and Larry Mitchell had a long talk. Then he came to Margaret.

"The boy's right. We will say nothing to Travers until this business is definitely settled. Until we are sure. And, Margaret, don't worry so!" he urged.

"Wouldn't you worry? When Travers' whole future is at stake, —his happiness . . . his health even . . . ?"

"He's in excellent condition, thanks to . . . Mary Lou," the doctor reminded her.

"Yes, thanks to her. But what is to happen to her? And to him when he knows the truth? Oh, Dan, I'm frightened . . . terribly frightened. I think it's been a dreadful mistake, all the way through. Yet what could we do?" she asked helplessly.

"Nothing. What are you going to do now?"

"You and I are going to the opening night of the revue," she told him. "Larry is to get us tickets. He's getting up some sort of an affair at the Wynnes', that night . . . so that Travers won't wonder why he and Mary Lou aren't included in our party. . . ."

"I see," Mathews smiled. "And Larry's press agent job?"

Mrs. Lorrimer tried to laugh.

Mother Worried

"He says that the opening night is up to the critics, not the press agents. Dan, I can't wait to see her, to make sure, and—" She stopped—"Dan, how much is he going to hate us?" she asked.

In her talk with Larry Mitchell Mrs. Lorrimer applauded his wisdom in coming to her—and Mary Lou—with his news before doing anything else.

"I want to see this girl for myself," she told him, "and then I'll decide what to do. The question is, how much claim has she? I have never believed," she went on, "that Travers married her. It doesn't seem possible that no record has been kept of the marriage, even war times weren't as lax as that. Just what kind of a person is she, Larry?"

"I liked her," he said slowly. "She's pretty hard, of course. She has had bad times, one can see that. But somehow I feel she's a good sort. If she had a legitimate claim, however, I can't imagine her not pressing it. By all practical standards she'd be a fool not to. And she's far from being a fool. Your position—" he floundered and stopped, a little red.

"You mean money?" Mrs. Lorrimer laughed. "I see. Yes, that is just what I thought, too. Well, I'll go to the first night of the revue and see her for myself, Larry. It's all a dreadful sort of muddle, yet I suppose it is better than uncertainty as to whether she was dead or alive," she added, "at least we have something concrete to face. Even if we find, as I believe and hope, that she is not Travers' wife, there are still complications."

"Such as?" inquired Larry.

"Travers himself. If there was no marriage—and if there were not, why does he insist upon it?—there must at least have been some understanding, some relationship. I know my son. He would never repudiate a promise or an obligation," she said, her great eyes gravely fixed on Larry's and her delicate, nobly featured face quivering a little.

"I can imagine what she was like, 10 years or more ago," Larry told her. "Very like, in some ways, Mary Lou. In others, not at all. Mrs. Lorrimer, please don't think me officious or impertinent, but it's Mary Lou that Travers cares for now. Not this strange woman. What's going to happen to him when he finds out? He can't . . . just transfer his affections, can he? I mean this memory he loved took on flesh and blood . . . became Mary Lou . . . and when he learns—"

He stopped again. Mrs. Lorrimer tried to smile.

"I know," she murmured, "that's what I am afraid of. When he learns the truth. Oh, we were forced into this whole affair by circumstances, by the coincidence of a resemblance. We went into it recklessly, meeting each situation as it arose and not looking ahead. I'm frightened," she told Larry, as she had told Dr. Mathews.

"I wish to God I'd never found her," Larry said sincerely, "or that I had had the nerve to keep quiet about it!"

"No, better this way," she reassured him, "at least one mystery will be cleared up for us. This other situation couldn't have gone on indefinitely. Travers hasn't pressed any claim he believed he had on . . . Mary Lou. He offered her, some time ago, an annulment of the alleged marriage if she found she couldn't come to care for him. Well, that indefinite position couldn't go on forever, of course. Eventually he would have to know the truth and we would be no nearer to knowing the real facts than we were. Don't worry, Larry. You did the right thing. Somehow it will all clear up," she said.

"I hope so—for all our sakes. But, forgive me, Mrs. Lorrimer; it is not so much of Travers I'm thinking, nor of you, even, as of Mary Lou!"

"I'm thinking of her, too," said Mrs. Lorrimer, low, and the brown eyes were misty.

On the opening night of the revue Jenny Wynne, prompted by Larry, though unconscious of his underlying motive, gave a small informal and entirely jolly party at her home for the avowed purpose of announcing their engagement.

Lorrimer had rather demurred at the party. So far he hadn't had to go where there were "crowds" of people.

"But there won't be 'crowds'," Mary Lou assured him, concealing her nervousness beneath a mask of bright gayety, "and we do owe it to Larry and Jenny. After all, we are responsible," she rattled on.

"I wish," Lorrimer told her, suddenly giving in, "that we were as good at matchmaking for ourselves as for others. After all, matchmaking begins at home!"

He smiled to see her flush, touched her hand fleetingly and heard her draw a sharp breath, unaware that it was sheer pain.

"All right, lets go," Travers said.

DAILY TRUE STORY— A Man's Job

He was the youngest chief ever appointed by the corporation commission to head the Bureau of Banking. And because he was remotely kin to the governor of the state, and there had been talk of political wire-pulling, Darnley Jeffords determined to demonstrate his capability of holding down the job.

Efficiency was to be the keynote of his regime in office and field. There had been a consultation with the assistant examiners before they commenced the fall campaign. His harrassed head clerk was making a complete report of work done in the office, and the files were being reviewed with dispatch.

That was how Darnley happened on the letter written to the Bank of Hillton by his predecessor, and the reply of the cashier of said bank, which had gone into the files without comment.

"Has nothing been done about S. D. Herndon's overdrafts?"

Miss Johnston, his secretary, replied to the chief with some asperity. "Mr. Moore thought small town banks should have some leeway, and he'd just let them work out the problem."

"I disagree with him," Darnley observed severely. "Next week I'll be in the vicinity of Hillton. I'll run over and interview this fellow Herndon. I'll wake him up!"

Arrives at Bank

Miss Johnston had opened her mouth to speak, when Darnley stated curtly: "That'll be all for this morning, please." So she withdrew, with a peculiar glitter in her pale blue eyes.

Hillton was a self-conscious little town that had spread quite a bit of new paint about. The Bank of Hillton glistened with a fresh yellow coat, and also was adorned with a sign proclaiming: "4 per cent on savings with absolute security." The cockyness of the sign irritated Darnley Jeffords. He stepped through the front door of the bank and looked about.

A fair girl was typing at a desk near the door. Her mass of straight gold hair, drawn back from a classic profile, failed to commend her to the chief, who watched unobserved. She was pecking laboriously at the keys, and her frown of concentration pronounced the task an arduous one.

"I'd like to speak to the person in charge," said Darnley, and the girl jumped and turned very red when she saw him at last. The rich color became her immensely, but in the eyes of the chief it added to her general air of inefficiency. No poise. . . .

He was obliged to correct the thought, however, for she quickly arose and came toward him with a smile and outstretched hand. "Why, you're Mr. Jeffords, the chief examiner!"

"Yes, I'm Jeffords. I'd like to see your employer, Miss."

She drew herself up several inches as she glared. "If you'll be good enough to take a chair, I'll give you a report."

She had disappeared into the shadowy depths of the back office and almost immediately there was a customer at the door.

An old man entered and seeing Darnley at the desk coughed in an apologetic manner. "I . . . stopped in to see Miss Sally, sir. If . . . if you've taken her place for the day. . . ."

"I'm in charge for the present," Darnley said. "What is it?"

Still the old man hesitated. "Just . . . just my overdraft, sir. Sally said it would be all right, but I got to worrying."

Examiner Angry

"You did right to worry, for it's not all right," snapped the chief. "Overdrafts are unlawful, and you should pay up."

"Unlawful?" the old man rolled his eyes and visibly trembled in his agitation. "Unlawful . . . why Sally said . . ."

And here the girl reappeared, holding a ledger in her arms. She put it on the desk before the chief, open it. Then she went quickly and took the old man by the arm.

"You've been worrying again, Uncle Tim! Now you mustn't do that. You're not to think any more about that overdraft, do you understand?"

"Then it's nothing unlawful?"

"Indeed it isn't, Uncle Tim. The bank's not worrying."

When he had gone Darnley turned almost savagely upon the girl. "So that's the way you do business? Just tell Herndon for me . . ."

"Will you look at our trial balance, Mr. Jeffords?"

Darnley bent forward and scrutinized the ledger. "Loans and discounts . . . cash reserve . . . money on deposit . . . overdrafts . . . ?"

"You see, there aren't any now," the girl said quietly.

"But you told that old fellow . . ."

A softer expression crept into her face, though she still spoke in a curt, formal tone. "Uncle Tim Hale was once the wealthiest man in town. He got involved in land deals . . . borrowed too much . . . had trouble with his account here. His sons finally got him straightened out and took over his affairs, and he's never been the same. Always worrying . . . usually imagine's he overdrawn."

"And you just humor him?"

The girl nodded. "It's the only thing to do. And one must humor people everywhere, Mr. Jeffords, even sane, practical people. The farmers and merchants of this town have been allowed to borrow too much . . . allowed to frequently overdraw. They're all honest folk, but they can't be pushed too hard. When I took charge I found I had to go easy with them, look ahead. I wrote Mr. Moore. If you'd read further back in your office file . . ."

"Then," exclaimed Darnley, "you're . . ."

"I'm that very inefficient cashier—S. D. Herndon."

Six months later the chief examiner again left the office for a trip to the town of Hillton. "Don't see why he's so concerned about that particular bank," remarked the head bookkeeper.

Miss Johnston sniffed contemptuously. She didn't enlighten him, but she had her own ideas about the Bank of Hillton and it's woman cashier.

The head bookkeeper would have been further astonished had he been able to observe his chief early the following morning. That young official rode down a mountain trail beside a tall fair girl who sat her mount like a lady-centaur. All the world was charming, glistening fresh with morning dew. Nature offered every inducement for the heart of man to rejoice with her; and yet the chief's brow was troubled. Perhaps he had indeed allowed himself to become weighted down with the responsibilities of office.

Not Satisfied

The girl was glancing at him now and then, half-hidden amusement in her gray eyes. "Is the supervision of banks still such an arduous duty, Mr. Jeffords?"

"Not with the co-operation I'm fortunate in receiving."

"But women in charge of small town institutions, and overdrafts?"

He knew she was mocking, and he suddenly smiled. "I don't discuss overdrafts so early in the morning. As to a woman in charge, since you speak of it, I'm not altogether satisfied."

"I don't understand?" She sat very straight on her horse.

"Sometime I'll tell you exactly what I have in view."

She looked into his eyes and suddenly blushed. "You're looking ahead." She tried to be casual.

"I have been—and not pushing rashly, do you understand?"

She was silent, but he could see that she did, and he remembered his first resolve, to put a man in charge of the Bank of Hillton. He was sure he would carry it out now—but, perhaps, from a very different motive.

New York — While waiters in fashionable hotels average 10 per cent on tips, John Ravatino, page boy at the New Yorker Hotel gets as high as 133⅓ per cent. Recently he received a $20 tip for delivering a 15-cent package of cigarets.

Pinchot's Strange Course

Governor Disappoints By Not Supporting Musmanno Bill for Abolition of Coal and Iron Police.

When Gov. Pinchot's henchmen in the House of Representatives attempted yesterday to kill the Musmanno bill for abolition of the coal and iron police by recommitting it to the Law and Order Committee, an attempt which, fortunately, was unsuccessful, Representative Musmanno remarked:

"It seems Gov. Pinchot has chosen to throw his lot with the coal industries rather than with the people of Western Pennsylvania."

Mr. Musmanno was probably too harsh in this stricture. Gov. Pinchot no doubt honestly desires to remedy the ills that have grown out of the coal and iron police system as now constituted. There is no reason to question the sincerity of the stand that he took throughout the campaign in favor of protecting the people from the coal and iron police outrages.

It must be admitted, though, that the Governor's course in respect to the matter is strange, and makes it difficult for his supporters to defend him.

The Musmanno bill is vastly superior to the administration coal and iron police bill. The latter contains dangerous "jokers" so obvious that it is hard to understand the Governor's persistence in advocating it.

Questionable Purchases

Some of the County's Transactions, It Seems, Also Call for Investigation.

Suspicion, aroused by John D. Houston's revelations of favoritism in the purchase of foodstuffs by the city, now falls upon some of the county's transactions.

County Commissioner Charles C. McGovern charges that "trick specifications" were used to eliminate competitive bidding in the purchase of furniture for the new county office building.

McGovern's demand for an explanation will be echoed by taxpayers throughout the county.

There may have been no violation of the law in so wording the specifications that only one company's product would conform to them; but whether illegal or not, the procedure indicates lack of regard for the principles of good government.

The county as well as the city administration should be made to understand that the people will not be content with mere conformity to the law, but insist on an honest attempt to save money in expenditures made with the taxes which they pay.

The Strike at W. & J.

Students Were Ill-Advised in Walking Out Before Other Methods Were Exhausted.

It seems incredible that the students at Washington and Jefferson College would have gone on strike unless they had a genuine and serious grievance. But such justification as they have offered for their action is not very convincing.

The charge against President Baker that receives most prominence is that he has insisted on too high a standard of scholarship for the college football players, and is therefore responsible for the unsatisfactory showing made by W. & J. in intercollegiate sports.

That complaint will not receive much sympathy, since the feeling is now quite general that the desirability of prowess in athletics has been over-emphasized, and that scholastic achievement is more worthy of encouragement. The trend in such universities as Pennsylvania and Yale is decidedly in the very direction in which President Baker is accused of guiding W. & J. Moreover, it is not to be overlooked that only a few years ago W. & J. was sharply criticized for unethical practices in its efforts to get a winning football team.

Regardless of the merits of their grievances, the students were ill-advised in walking out before they had exhausted all other methods of obtaining redress.

Why Censors Are Desired

"Lysistrata" Illustrates the Need for Careful Police Supervision of the Stage.

The public of Pittsburgh, as of other cities, has become more or less callous to indecency on the stage. Director Clark, of the Department of Public Safety, has refused to interfere with the performance of more than one off-color play. This makes the complaint against "Lysistrata" all the more impressive.

There is no room for doubt that it is obscene, and the fact that it is a classic has no bearing on the question whether or not it is proper to present it. Filth should not be publicly displayed, even though it be the product of a genius or have literary merit.

There is a strong demand for stage censorship. Plays like "Lysistrata" explain the demand.

A Large Steel Order

Signs Multiply That Business Is Improving in the Pittsburgh District.

The opinion was expressed in these columns several weeks ago that the enactment over President Hoover's veto of the bill authorizing increased loans to veterans on adjusted service certificates marked a definite turn for the better in the business situation. Subsequent developments have not changed that opinion.

The order for 125,000 tons of structural steel which has just been placed with the United States Steel Corporation by the builders of the Rockefeller "Radio City" in New York City is but one of a number of encouraging signs.

The total amount of structural steel contracts awarded last week is described as setting a new high record.

Most of the steel will be rolled and fabricated in mills of the Pittsburgh district.

These orders and other new business, supplemented by the work being done under the Pittsburgh Plan, give a rosy outlook to the industrial situation.

Classifying Husbands

If men and women could be classified and card-indexed, picking a husband or wife would be as easy as selecting an apple or a bunch of asparagus.

* * *

You'd simply say to yourself, "I want that type of husband," or "that brand of wife," and you'd look around until you found it, and be satisfied.

For instance, wives might be classed as follows: The strictly modern; the sweet domestic home-maker; the jazz wife or baby-doll; the hard-working drudge; the social climber; the reformer; the nagger, etc. But, alas, they don't come that way.

Many a modern business woman is a good home-maker; many a perfect home-maker is a prize nagger; many an eloquent nagger is a faithful drudge or a wild jazz-baby; and many a fluffy baby-doll is a social climber.

And, with husbands, it's the same. There is the nice tame Regular Husband, who works hard all day, comes home promptly to dinner every evening, pays the bills, picks up his own things, and admires his own wife.

* * *

And there is the philandering husband, who regards marriage as a parking space, where he can leave a woman until he gets through playing around and is ready to go home nights.

There is the big Cunarder, who looks so VERY impressive and all that, yet is nothing but a dead weight, who permits his nervous, high-strung wife to tow him along through life, while he blows the fog-horn and makes a big noise.

There is the domestic bully, or Big He-man, who keeps his wife in a perpetual state of cowed awe and palpitating fear.

And there is the charming, dashing, good-natured, ornamental playboy, who makes life a song, one day, and a dirge, the next, for any woman.

But do they come that way? Only in plays and novels, dear heart. Many a Cunarder has to be coddled and pampered like a clinging vine; and many a clinging vine goes around philandering, while his wife is downtown working to buy him monogrammed cigarettes. Many a philanderer is a bully around the house. And many a tame husband has his weak moments and his vanity.

* * *

God gave us all varieties and combinations to suit our tastes and purposes, and match our own dispositions and temperaments. And the ideal husband—or wife is the one who makes you HAPPY!

STANLEY, MASTER JOURNALIST

By Archibald Henderson

One of the most stirring and adventurous professions, or undertakings, is exploration. Many of the highest qualities are required for its successful prosecution. Indispensable are leadership, resource, scientific knowledge, patience, endurance, judgment and common sense. The stories of explorers are among the most exciting the world has to offer. Few careers in modern times have so moved the world as that of Sir Henry Morton Stanley, famous chiefly for going to the relief of Dr. Livingstone in the heart of Africa and finding him.

Born as John Rowlands, about 1840, in Denbigh, Wales, he spent a miserable boyhood in the poorhouse, as the result of the poverty of his family. At the age of 16, ill-treated by everyone, he ran away from the poorhouse and shipped as cabin boy on an American vessel bound for New Orleans. After being cruelly treated by the skipper, he left the ship and was aided by a broker named Stanley, whose name he took and bore through life.

Stanley's sense of allegiance and loyalty was not very high. After serving for a time in the armies of the Confederacy, he was captured at the Battle of Shiloh; transferred his allegiance to the northern side, and served in the artillery. Discharged on account of ill health, he returned to his native place, where he was disowned by his relatives and ordered to leave. He enlisted in the United States Navy, witnessed some notable engagements, sent brilliant accounts of them to the newspapers. After the war was over, he became a journalist, with a particular interest in exploration. His attempt to explore Asia in 1866 ended disastrously, as he was robbed by a band of Turkomans and thrown into prison. After his release, he returned to the United States; and the vivid narrative of his adventures won him a post as special correspondent of a St. Louis newspaper. Certain of his writings were published in the New York Herald. In the war between England and Abyssinia, he served as war correspondent for the Herald; and won fame for himself by a magnificent "scoop," sending his news of the English victory by wire and anticipating the other correspondents by several weeks!

Stanley's spectacular fame was won in carrying out the unique commission given him by James Gordon Bennett, to find Dr. Livingstone, who was lost in Africa searching for the Congo. After incredible hardships, he finally reached Livingstone in the neighborhood of Lake Tanganyika in darkest Africa. This exploit made him world famous, and his quiet words of greeting to the lost explorer were quoted everywhere: "Dr. Livingstone, I presume?" After making explorations in company and disproving the theory that Lake Tanganyika was connected with the Albert Nyanza, Stanley and Livingstone separated. Livingstone remained in Africa, to continue his search for the Congo, and Stanley returned to civilization, receiving a great ovation in London. After following the Ashanti war, he made a series of explorations in Africa, covering the better part of three years. He was often in danger of his life from hostile savages, and had to fight his way out. His explorations were of great geographical value in connection with Congo region.

When the British government could not be induced to settle and civilize the Congo, Stanley accepted the offer of King Leopold, of Belgium; and on August 15, 1879, returned to Africa to found the Congo Free State. After the fall of Khartum, he rescued Emir Pasha; and also discovered the Ruwenzori Mountains and the Albert Edward Nyanza. He died on May 10, 1904, his funeral services being conducted in Westminster Abbey.

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

Never mind how old I am. I'm old enough to know that Age might be mellowed wine if we would have it so.

But there's the rub—we won't have it so. At best we have only consolation prizes for Age—the heavy dividends are all awarded to Youth. We ourselves determine those prizes and awards. Experience doesn't come to us labeled. Life doesn't put tags on things. We humans put the tags on. Life gives us experience in a mass, as it gives us air in a mass, or water. It doesn't say: "This is a good experience"—or "This is a bad experience." It just grinds it out willy-nilly, without explanation or tabulation. Then we humans, in our egotism and ignorance, knowing nothing whatever of the beginnings or the endings of things, proceed to classify it.

"This is happy," we say—or "this is sad." "This is desirable and this is a weariness to the flesh." So we go, setting values on things. Arbitrary values, man made, and always of Youth. "Youth is wonderful," we say. "Youth is delightful. Youth holds all the high moments. But Age is terrible. Age is weak and sad and colorless and a bore."

Of course, if you've lived at all, you have long since discovered that the valuation we've put on Youth is all wrong. Youth isn't a time of ease and ecstasy. It's a lonely, confused, muddled time. Passion's a pest. Ambition's a gadfly. Pleasure gives us a tummy ache. The years between 20 and 40 make wonderful poetry, but difficult, and often disagreeable living.

Yet, because we have been assured so often that "Youth is a wonderful time," we continue to accept that valuation even in the midst of our discouragement and disillusion.

And as for the same reason, as we face Age, we prepare for the doldrums. They have told us that Age is a barren bitterness. So we resign ourselves to be barren and bitter. They've said that Life holds nothing after Fifty. So we don't look around to see if it's true or not.

It isn't true. The deflated valuation we've put on Age is as false as the inflated valuation we've set on Youth. Life DOES hold something after Fifty—it holds its rarest distillation of experience. It holds the wine of years.

Wine—have you ever watched the making of wine? The muddy beginning—the mass of crushed skins and seeds and pulp—the seething, fermenting, bubbling, reeking mass of troubled pulp—the muddy beginning so like Youth. And then the gradual settling. The scum and refuse rising to the top—making trouble—a nuisance. The purifying and the steadying of the depths—and at last, the clear, strong wine like liquid ruby with the heart of fire.

So it may be with age.

After the ferment of Youth—after the seething ferment of our earlier blunders and experiments, the turmoil of our tempers and terrors, our passion and pain, after the reek and fumes of restlessness and rebellion—comes the slow settling of maturity. Then the scum and refuse of temperament slowly separate from the depths of our natures.

At last life is mellowed and free—no longer roiled by its own revolt. The years have given us their mellow wine. There, in that wine is all that was valuable and vital in the bruised mass of experience—the wildness and sweetness of ambition and romance, the tang of adventure, the rich bouquet of achievement. But that which made the ferment and middiness has been eliminated.

That is what age might be if we would have it so. But we so rarely will have it so. We cling to those old foolish, arbitrary values which we have set upon experience—insist that Age is a time of emptiness and bitterness—and that there is nothing worth living for after the high moments of Youth are gone. We refuse to see that those "high moments" were only the bubbles in the wine press and that Age alone knows the good wine. So, like peevish children, we waste the precious gift which might have quenched the soul's deep thirst.

A Glimpse of Future War

"Observers" Will Be Dropped Down Below the Clouds.

AN AIR BATTLESHIP OF THE FUTURE WITH OBSERVER SUSPENDED FROM A CABLE.

This United States Army Corps photograph gives an idea of war in the future.

Destruction will come from the air on land and sea, and commercial ships will be destroyed by invisible submarines.

This picture gives an idea of future fighting from the air.

Cities attacked will strive to protect themselves with anti-aircraft guns, but thus far the success of such guns has been slight.

Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker and other American aces in the World War paid no attention at all to shots fired from the ground.

But a lighter-than-air machine, like the one above, would offer a good target for anti-aircraft weapons. This was shown when the British drove off attacking Zeppelins that appeared above London, after an ingenious Englishman learned how to set fire to the gas in the big bag.

Above is a lighter-than-air ship. Below it, suspended by a cable, is an officer whose business it is to observe, and by telephone send directions for firing and dropping bombs to the ship above him.

The big airship would remain ABOVE THE CLOUDS, invisible to the anti-aircraft marksmen.

And the observer at the end of the cable would be dropped BELOW THE CLOUDS, to see and report to officers above, giving directions for gunfire, and the dropping of explosive bombs, or poison gas.

Imagine a great city, on a cloudy day, knowing that war was in the air, looking up and seeing a thin cable dropping down through the clouds, with a man hanging at the end of it!

There would be popping of anti-aircraft guns, as marksmen tried to shoot down the observer. But the telephone would advise the men out of sight above the clouds, and they would drop bombs and poison gas.

Not a pleasant thing, that future war. It certainly should be the business of this country to keep prepared.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, March 19.—Fortunate Long Islanders, summering along the coast East of Fire Island, are revealing at this late date the source of their most excellent liquor supply. It was the gift of a generous sea—so easily acquired it seems almost incredible.

In the mornings they merely sauntered down to their private beaches and found cases of Scotch, rye, cordials or whatever the wild waves tossed up. All of which is rather mystifying without explanation. Near Quogue is a vigilant patrol against rum running.

When a barkentine faced capture, overboard went its cargo with a despairing glug and in most instances was washed ashore. Finders became keepers. While the problem was never settled in court, marine lawyers say they know of no way lucky finders could be prosecuted.

For miles the beach was a treasure trove. An actor is reputed to have salvaged enough liquor off his beach to fill two capacious cellars. Chemical tests showed that it was all the real stuff and not a bottle had been cut. A bootlegger offered him $75,000 for the lot.

A number of seaside homes in the area installed old-time bars for week-end festivals. Decorators were called in to touch off the tap rooms in the manner of the old saloon. Floors were sprinkled with sawdust and mirrors soaped with mid-Victorian curlicues.

A few featured bartenders with hair roached back into frozen wavelets, glittering paste diamond studs and walrus mustaches. Cash registers were arranged so that when punched they would announce: "This on the house!" "Now we'll have another!" and other pleasantries.

The late Alan Dale met the kittenish Billie Burke for the first time in London a number of years ago. "I was surprised," he cabled his paper, "when she did not hop up on the arm of my chair."

* * *

Elinor Glynn has deserted New York and Hollywood temporarily for London. She has taken a town house for the season and is turning out a novel while entertaining her American friends. Chaplin the other day dropped around for oolong and crumpets, proving that the novelist has entirely forgotten the comedian's famous quip at her expense. As the legend goes, they were at a Hollywood dance. Miss Glynn sent a note to Chaplin's table: "You do not look as funny as I thought." Chaplin sent a reply reading: "Neither do you!"

* * *

While waiting in the lobby of the Empire Theater a shabby, little man clutched my coat sleeve. He wanted 25 cents for a night's lodging and was plainly under the influence of liquor. Handing him a quarter I said with annoyance: "I don't know why I am giving this to you, but here it is." Pocketing it, he replied: "I don't know why I want to live, but I do." And he shuffled off. Somehow I was not able to get him out of my mind all evening.

* * *

Sitting a few seats away in the theater was the youthful Edna Wallace Hopper by her own admission past 60. There was something vitally alive about her interest in the play and quick bird-like comments to a companion. It is a quality among nearly all past middle aged women who retain their youth—a mental quality not concerned with cosmetic fol de rol.

The most youthful looking man for his years, I think, is Frank Craven, the actor. Next to him is a writer whose name I am sick of mentioning.

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. Mundy

How do you as a resident of a large city entertain relatives and friends from smaller places who come to visit you?

Do you rush them out to dine in some expensive eating place and then hurry them to the theater and then speed home?

Having done this do you feel that you have performed your duty?

You do not ask your guest where he might like to go—what he would like to see.

Doubtless you elect to do the things you most enjoy yourself.

But the small town person usually has some ideas of what he would like to do and see in the city he visits.

Why not give him a chance to see what he would appreciate most?

His ideas might not interest you but you are entertaining him.

He has probably read and heard of many little things about the city which have aroused more than a passing fancy.

It is your job to find out what he would like to do most.

To an outsider there is much that is more interesting than eating expensive dishes and seeing high-priced shows.

Remember that when entertaining your friend from the "sticks" and get him to outline his own program.
